Two-Lane Bypasses Proposed as Solution To Princeton Traffic

Several members of the Planning Board met with New Jersey Department of Transportation Commissioner Frank Wilson recently to urge two-lane by-passes around Princeton as the solution to traffic problems in Princeton and in the region as a whole.

Alain Kornhauser, chai.man of the board's circulation subcommittee, reported on this meeting at last Thursday's Planning Board meeting. Using over-head slide projection and a handout covering his main points, Mr. Kornhauser said the group started off the meeting by praising the NJDOT for its "recent successes."

He cited the new Dinky bridge over Route 1 as a reaffirmation of Princeton's interest in preserving the Dinky line. He also cited the downscaling of the Scudder's Mill and Alexander Road overpasses on Route 1 from what had been originally proposed, and he applauded the pro-

Computer Networking Seen as Way To Enrich Academic & Civic Life

In June of 1994, TOWN TOPICS published an article about a group of area residents who had applied for a grant from the Federal government to develop a community-wide computer network connecting schools, local government, libraries, and homes.

The LifeLearn Community Network, as the project was to be called, was not funded; but some of its proponents continue to explore ways in which computers, and the international computer network known as the Internet, can be made a part of the academic and civic life of the Princeton community. Introducing them to the school system is one of their main goals.

The potential uses of computer networks and the Internet as educational resources have been a hot topic among educators for years. In their 1992 paper "Telecommunications and K-12 Educators: Findings from a National Survey," Margaret Honey and Andre Henriquez summarized the results of their survey of 550 K-12 educators "who are active users of telecommunications technology."

"Respondents in the survey," they found, "report a number of benefits to using telecommunications technology with their students. These include expanding students' awareness about the world in general, accessing information that would be difficult to get otherwise, ...helping students to feel successful, and allowing students to undertake more collaborative, group-based activities."

Other benefits mentioned included an improvement in the students' inquiry-based analytical skills.

A majority of schools in the country have access to some kind of telecommunications equipment, but in most cases

Continuing Care Facility Receives Chilly Reception

The proposal to swap Tusculum for acreage in Community Park North on which to build a continuing caro retiromont facility was not warmly received by the majority of the members of the Planning Board who hoard the proposal Friday morning.

Several dozen interested residents turned up for the early morning session, which had been scheduled as a meeting of the Planning Board officers with Michael Doyle, the venture capitalist who has been actively pursuing the creation of a CCRC in Princeton, and members of the board of Princeton Retiroment Community, the non-profit entity that will oversoe the construction and management of the facility.

Mr. Doyle outlined the proposal whereby he and his development group would purchase the 82-acre Tusculum property, including the historic house and barn, and turn it over to Princeton Township in exchange for 48 acres of Community Park North. He emphasized that the Pettoranello Gardens would not be included in the swap.

The CCRC would be built on about 30 of the 48 acres. Mr. Doyle said that if the nearly $1 million in Green Acros funds that have been pledged for the purchase of 25 to 30 acres along the back of Tusculum to create a link with Witherspoon Woods in the north was released to the group, it would turn those funds over to the Township.

Mr. Doyle acknowledged that access to the 30 acres of developable land in the center of Community Park North, north of the stream, was something that had to be worked out. He told the Planning board officers, "If you're against this idea please say so. You will be doing us a favor."

Township Mayor Michele Tuck obliged by saying, "I don't like this idea." She cited tho complexity of the transaction and the likelihood that it would cost the Township time and lawyer's fees "to sort it out." She also said she thought the Township would be trading awey "a very desirablo aroa."

Margon Ponick, e co-vice-chair of the Planning Board, raisod a host of issues, beginning with tho noed for two usablo working ontrances and exits, which sho said would be moro complicatod than Mr. Doylo seemed to think. She also cited what she callod "tho environmental precodont,"

Joint Civil Rights Director Will Also Assume Duties Of Former Welfare Director

Joint Civil Rights Diroctor Ovie Lattimore will now also serve as welfare diroctor for tho Borough and Township This movo had been urgod by Borough officials for the past several months, but the two Local Assistance Boards — until last week — had rejected it.

The Boards took the position that they wanted to hire an experienced welfaro director for 29 hours a week. They had settled on a candidate, and had seen Township Committee, at its meeting on February 13, agree to budget $15,000 as its half of the director's salary.

But the following evening, at the February 14 Borough Council meeting, the two Local Assistance Boards saw Borough Council allocate $7,520 — half the Township figure — toward the office of welfare director.

The motion to provide the $7,520, made by Roger Martindell, included making Mr. Lattimore available as welfare director for up to 25 hours a meaning that other parks would be vulnerable to being swapped.

She pointed out that Community Park North had been purchased with Housing and Urban Development (HUD) money, not Green Acres, and it would take a decision by the HUD Secretary to release it. Mrs. Penick said she thought three-story buildings, if that was what Mr. Doyle was contemplating, would "change the nature of the area as parkland."

Mr. Doyle pointed out that three-story buildings are allowed in the CCRC ordinance developed by the Planning Board last year with her participation. Mrs. Penick acknowledged she had voted for the ordinance.

"What is it you want for Tusculum?" Mr. Doyle asked her. Mrs. Penick spoke of Tusculum being a municipal treasure and the importance of it being restored and the property deed restricted. She said she was concerned that the Township would not want to undertake the expense of maintaining it or transforming the buildings into a community center, as once envisioned.

Many Question Marks

Phyllis Marchand said that although she could see the need for a CCRC in the community, she was not sure Community Park North "is the right spot." "I'm a little negative," Mrs. Marchand told Mr. Doyle. "There are so many question marks. I'm afraid the ambiance [of Mountain Lakes Preserve] would be lost."

Mrs. Marchand suggested Mr. Doyle and his group "look very very hard" for other sites." "We have," he responded.

Maynett Cox-Breithaupt, chair of the Township Historic Preservation Commission, said the Commission had not studied the proposal but that it would be concerned that the buildings be taken care of "as they deserve to be"; that the "historical context" of the buildings be preserved; and that the vistas from Cherry Hill Road be preserved.

William Enslin, chairman of the Planning Board, asked whether Princeton Retirement Community intends to pay municipal property taxes as if it were a for-profit entity. Mr. Doyle, his attorney and the chairman of his board all affirmed this. Mr. Enslin also suggested that by the time the Green Acres property and the area around the house and barn was subtracted, the remaining 25 or so acres would be substantially less than what it was being swapped for in Community Park North and therefore it wasn't an even swap.

Mr. Doyle said that the remaining area would be more like 40 acres and suggested that Tusculum acreage would have more value associated with it because of the historic aspects.

Support from Mayor

The first positive comment came from Borough Mayor Marvin Reed, who admitted to a bias: both his parents now live in a continuing care retirement community and their lives and his life have been enhanced knowing that they are well cared for, he said.

Mr. Reed said he supported the proposal because "Princeton needs" a continuing care retirement community. He said he thought the Planning Board should be "more proactive" in finding suitable sites that would work. "The more we find excuses, the more we drive up the price" of possible sites. One member of the audience applauded this remark.

Mr. Reed also said, "The Planning Board needs to be more pro-active on the fate of Tusculum" and pointed out that the Borough had said it would participate if the fields were turned to active recreation. Mr. Reed called the Community Park North site "ideal" for a continuing care retirement community because it is one of the few places remaining from which seniors would be able to walk to town."

Mr. Enslin then said that his sentiments were similar to Mr. Reed's "A CCRC belongs in Princeton Township," he said. He added that he was "intrigued by the idea" and thought it should be explored. "This has the possibility of being a win-win situation," he said. "It would provide needed facilities and would also allow us to deal with Tusculum. I would be personally disappointed if [a CCRC in Princeton Township] doesn't come about. We've got to see this work."

Norman Callaway of N.T. Callaway Real Estate, who is marketing the Tusculum property for the Bank of New York, interjected at one point that the bank had decided that "this is the year to sell Tusculum." He said the Bank had been approached by the State of New Jersey interested in buying 30 acres with house and barn and also by developers who were projecting that 24 developable two-acre lots could be carved out of the property, plus the lot on which the house and barn stands.

Dr. Mary-Elizabeth Alexander, granddaughter of Mary Winans Pardee, the late owner of Tusculum, and one of the three trustees of the trust in which the property was placed after Mrs. Pardee died, indicated that the trust was "prepared to sell to a developer." "The community has presented such an obstacle," Dr. Alexander remarked. "I was in favor of a CCRC."

Concerns of Residents

Several residents voiced concerns about various aspects of the swap proposal, including Robert von Zumbusch of the Friends of Princeton Open Space, Elizabeth Hutter, a former Planning Board member, Nicholas Carnevale, immediate past president of the Princeton-Pettoranello Foundation, and James Floyd.

Mr. Floyd pointed out that the Township had once been approached about locating low income housing on the Community Park North property and had rejected the idea. He also suggested that the Planning Board's CCRC ordinance, which he termed "retroactive zoning," had "screwed up the guidelines."

Reached on Tuesday for his reaction to the meeting, Mr. Doyle said his group would have to deliberate on the responses it received at the meeting. But he said they would continue to look at properties inside and outside Princeton. "We are pushing vigorously to find a suitable site," Mr. Doyle said.

One person who attended the meeting thinks the swap is still doable. He is James R. Howley, an investment banker from Pittsburgh who has

Study of Consolidation Moves a Step Closer

A referendum on whether to study the consolidation of the two Princetons came another step closer to reality last Tuesday night when Borough Council introduced an ordinance that would place the question on the November 7 ballot.

A similar ordinance was introduced by Township Committee a week earlier. The Borough's public hearing is scheduled for Tuesday night, February 28, at 8 p.m. The Township's public hearing will take place at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, March 6.

Unlike Township Committee, Council was not unanimous in its support of the ordinance. David Goldfarb and Arthur Saylor voted against it. It was approved by Mark Freda, Roger Martindell, Sandra Starr, and Mildred Trotman.

About 20 people were in the Council meeting room, and a number spoke against the introduction of the ordinance. They included Orren Jack Turner, who played a major role in past anti-consolidation efforts. Corinne Kyle gave her support to the ordinance, as did several others in the audience, including former Borough Council candidate Arnold Smolens and Christine St. John.

The supporters did not ask for consolidation, but wanted to have the question studied to see what its advantages and disadvantages might be. "This is a study commission," said Ms. St. John. "We're going to need ratables. This might be a way of getting more ratables from the Township."

Ronald Nielsen described consolidation as "Anschluss," a takeover of the Borough by the Township, He said that Mr. Freda and Ms. Trotman were elected by their "special constituencies" and predicted neither would be elected in a consolidated Princeton, "where the Township will outvote the Borough."

Study of Two Aspects

Councilman Martindell said a study commission, if elected by the voters in November, would be charged with studying both corporate consolidation and the consolidation of services. They are, he added, totally separate.

Continuing his opposition to the study commission, Councilman Goldfarb said that after the Borough defeated the establishment of a study commission in 1991, relations with the Township worsened for a few years. "I want to avoid that," he said. "I intend to vote against it."

"I don't think the interests of Princeton Borough would be achieved through consolidation," said Councilman Saylor. The small town governing body is the last bastion of home rule."

Councilman Freda pointed out that taxes in the Borough had doubled since 1984, and that a consolidation study might show further large increases ahead. "The tax picture has changed dramatically," he said. "We have to find some relief for the Borough."

Mr. Goldfarb recommended that Council make clear to the Township that Borough voters will not approve a study of consolidation, and asked that the two municipalities begin studying an expansion of joint services.

If a consolidation study should be approved by voters in both municipalities in November, the consolidation study commissioners — also elected in November — would begin their study. If the commission were to recommend consolidation, the question would go before the voters in November 1996. If the voters approved, the combined Princeton would elect officials in November 1997, and the new municipality would make its debut on January 1, 1998, with the swearing in of a new mayor and other officials.

Rejected Study in 1991

In 1991, Borough voters rejected the formation of a study commission by 377 votes. In 1979, a referendum on consolidation was held, with Township voters resoundingly approving the merger. It lost by 33 votes in the Borough.

Orren Jack Turner on Monday morning said it was too early to announce plans for defeating a consolidation study referendum in the Borough, but that he would campaign against it if the ordinance is approved.

"People of Princeton Borough don't want consolidation," he said. "They will prove it by voting against the study."

School Board Candidates At Middle School Forum

On Monday, March 6 at 7:30, Partnership for Arts Education will sponsor a second annual "Meet the Candidates" evening at which candidates for the Princeton Regional School Board will speak on budget cuts and arts issues, and will take questions from the audience not only on the arts but any subject of interest to the voters.

The meeting will take place in the John Witherspoon Middle School Auditorium and will open with a brief appearance by the middle school choral and drama students.

Again this year, the panel will be moderated by Terry Clark, Johnson Park parent and president of Education Resources Group, a nonprofit firm that specializes in education program evaluation.

Partnership for Arts Education is a support group of both parents and concerned community residents who promote high quality arts education in Princeton schools. Marcia Wood and Ronnie Lowenstein, co-founders of Partnership, will begin the discussion with an update on the "State of the Arts in the Princeton Regional Schools."

The public is invited to attend.

New Building Approved On Old Gas Station Site

The Planning Board voted unanimously in a voice vote last Thursday to approve revised plans for a new building housing two restaurants on the site of the former Mobil Gas Station at Nassau and Olden Street.

The property has been purchased by Elsie and Ray Pang, owners of the Orchid Pavilion diagonally across Nassau Street and the Hunan Restaurant on Witherspoon Street. Mrs. Pang's previously submitted plan called for tearing down the existing structure and replacing it with a building containing two restaurants and retail and office space. At concept review the board felt this amount of development was too much for the small site and would create parking problems in the already congested area.

In the revised plans, office space has been eliminated, except for a small office on the second floor of a small extension to the rear containing the trash receptacle. This office will be for the manager of one of the restaurants, according to Vincent Myers, an architect with Harvey Myers Associates.

In addition, parking has been increased from 13 spaces to 16, and the number of variances required reduced to four. The variances involved front and side yard setbacks, a four-space parking deficiency, and a requirement that a four-foot planting strip be provided around the perimeter of the parking area.

The Site Plan Review Advisory Board (SPRAB), which reviewed the project a couple of weeks before the Planning Board, said in its report that the variances should be granted because the surrounding properties all have tight front yard and side yard setbacks. SPRAB, the Borough Engineer and the Borough Zoning Officer made several suggestions which Mrs. Pang agreed to.

One was to provide a minimum aisle width of 22 feet between cars in the parking lot and to increase the width of the parking stalls. This was accomplished by reducing the depth of the building four feet, removing some of the compact parking spaces and adding a half a foot to the width of the regular parking stalls.

Parking Behind Building

The parking will be behind the building, with access from Olden Street. William Enslin raised the issue of employee parking, asking whether the Pangs would provide off-site parking for employees. Corinne Kyle also expressed concern about the adequacy of parking and agreed with the notion of off-site parking for employees.

Borough Mayor Marvin Reed said, "Finally we have a proposal that eliminates three curb cuts and at the applicant's expense, not the Borough's." He said the curb cuts had made for "incredibly difficult traffic flow at this corner." He added that there have been other applicants wanting to build on the site, but they all wanted to preserve the curb cuts.

Among the conditions imposed by the Planning Board in granting approval was one requiring Mrs. Pang to provide off-site parking for four employees — equal to parking deficiency. The number of seats in both restaurants was limited to 92 — including the times during good weather when dining may take place on a roof-top patio area.

Mrs. Pang is proposing to repave the sidewalks along Olden Street and Nassau Street and to create a brick area between the sidewalk and the front of the building. The curb cuts that will be removed will be replaced with grass, and the board asked that the landscape subcommittee review the color of the brick pavers and also whether additional trees could be placed in the grassy right-of-way.

It was also stipulated that the adequacy of the lighting be reviewed after construction, and that the exhaust be monitored for six months. Finally, it was recommended that Mrs. Pang continue to try to negotiate with Bell Telephone about a chain link fence that is located on its property directly behind hers in an effort to have it removed and replaced with landscaping.

During public comment Burnet Sams, owner of the building housing the Lamplighter Bookstore across Nassau Street, spoke in favor of the proposal, as did Alan Sussman of Leigh Avenue.

Tennis Fees

The season ticket rates at the tennis complex are up $5 in each category. Adult rates will go up from $50 to $55, children from $25 to $30 and senior citizens from $20 to $25. The nonreservation walk-on fee has also increased from $3 to $4 for residents and $6 to $8 for nonresident guests.

Reservation blocks are for an hour and a half. The Department will offer season tickets to residents at last year's rates for the month of March. Those interested in buying a permit at the reduced rate should come to the office during that month.

This year the Recreation Department will also offer family permits for the tennis courts. The rate for the family plan is $120. The tennis complex will open officially April 8 and close October 29.

Some nonresident tennis memberships are available at twice the resident rate.

Summer Day Camp

Day Camp fees have also increased for the 1995 season. The basic cost for the six-week program is $225 for the first child and $50 for each additional child. Pre-camp and after-camp costs will remain the same as last year at $60 and $90, respectively.

The Recreation Department is offering an early-bird special on Day Camp fees. Those wishing to save $15 on the basic program and $5 for each additional child in the family may come to the Recreation office during the month of March to enroll at last year's rates.

The Day Camp program will begin on July 5 and run through August 11. It is open to Princeton residents only.

Council Is Expected To Introduce '95 Budget

Borough Council will have an opportunity to discuss the $14 million proposed 1995 municipal budget at its meeting scheduled for Tuesday night, February 21. The budget was expected to be introduced at this meeting in order to meet the February 24 deadline for applying for State discretionary aid.

The proposed $14 million budget is just $30,000 higher than last year's budget.

Borough Administrator Tom Shannon said that both revenues and spending are flat. In addition, the Borough is reducing its reliance on surplus. Last year, it applied $1,425,000 in surplus to support the budget. This year, it will apply only $1,050,000.

The proposed budget calls for an 8 cent increase in the municipal tax rate, from $1.01 per $100 of assessed valuation to $1.09. Under the 1995 rate, the owner of a house assessed at $125,000 would pay an additional $100 in municipal tax, from $1,262 in 1994 to $1,362 in 1995.

Under the Police Benevolent Association (PBA) contract, Borough police will get a 5 percent salary increase. Public Works and Sewer Operating Committee employees, covered under a Communications Workers of America (CWA) contract, are scheduled to receive a 4.8 percent salary increase.

Mr. Shannon said he used the 4.8 percent salary increase figure for all other Borough employees. In addition to between $150,000 and $200,000 in salary increases, the budget includes an additional $150,000 for debt service.

State in an amount equivalent to 2 cents on the tax rate.

With this early introduction of the budget, Mr. Shannon plans to apply again for the aid. One point in the Borough's favor is that 51 percent of its properties are tax-exempt, he said.

Personnel changes in the 1995 budget include the elimination of a full-time zoning clerk; the reduction of a full-time health clerk to part-time, with no benefits; the replacement of two vacant part-time clerk positions with one shared part-time clerk; and the elimination of one full-time sewer maintenance position.

Mr. Shannon is concerned about next year's tax rate. The State this year reduced the Borough's contribution to pensions by $170,000, and reduced the amount of aid by the same amount. "You can't keep up a long-term pension plan on partial payments," he said. "Obviously it will go up next year, but no one thinks the state aid will go up."

Historical Trends

In a report prepared for Mayor and Council, Mr. Shannon examined historical Borough budgetary and tax trends. The report shows that the Borough budget doubled between 1984 and 1990, from $6.4 million to $12.6 million. Substantial cost increases in insurance, trash collection, police salaries, and debt service fueled the rise.

Fortunately for the Borough, its nontax revenues also doubled during these years, from $4.5 million to $8.9 million.

In the last ten years, the Borough tax rate has more than doubled. From 1990 to 1995, the Borough budget rose from $12.6 million to $14 million, at a rate of approximately 2.5 percent a year.

Township Man Arrested For Cocaine Possession

Princeton Borough police reported the arrest of a Mulberrry Row man on a number of drug charges last week.

According to police reports, Sergeant Dennis McManimon was in a patrol car on Clay Street at approximately 1:25 a.m. on Sunday, when he came upon a 1972 Mercedes-Benz that was blocking the road.

A man and a woman were in the vehicle, which was standing along the north curb of the road with the engine running. Sgt. McManimon asked the driver to step out of the vehicle, and conducted a pat-down search for his own safety.

According to police reports, the search uncovered a can of mace and the remains of a marijuana cigarette in the man's pocket. A further search of the car revealed three bags of crack cocaine and $1,125 in cash.

The driver, 61-year-old Henry Owen Jr. of 33 Mulberry Row, was arrested and charged with possession of cocaine, possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, and possession of cocaine with intent to distribute in a school zone. He will also face several motor vehicle charges for presenting an altered driver's license and other offenses.

Mr. Owen was released on 10 percent of $5,000 bail. He will face a preliminary hearing on February 27. The woman who was in the car was not charged with any wrongdoing.

There is no charge for attending, but reservations are required. Call 896-1912.

It was reported that Princeton Packet Publications, 300 Witherspoon Street, was robbed of $603 in cash and checks between 8 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. on February 13. The theft was discovered by an employee.

Township police reported a burglary and theft at a David Brearley Court residence last week. According to reports, the unlocked residence was entered between 9 a.m. and 12:30 p.m. on Sunday.

Removed from the premises was $594 worth of property. Included in the missing items were a Super Nintendo computer gaming system and several game cartridges, a portable CD player, and $65 cash.

A Trek mountain bike valued at $310 was stolen from a rack outside the John Witherspoon Middle School between noon on February 17 and 5:30 p.m. the next evening.

The bike had been locked to a rack, but the lock was pried off, said police.

The garage of a Jefferson Road residence was robbed of $160 worth of miscellaneous hand tools between 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday and 10:30 a.m. on Saturday.

Police saw no signs of forced entry, but the victim believes the garage to have been locked.

Conference on Aging Scheduled for Sunday

A mini-conference, planned as a preliminary to the upcoming White House Conference on Aging, will be held in Princeton on Sunday afternoon. The meeting has been organized as a public forum to develop recommendations to be considered for a national aging policy when the fourth White House Conference meets in May. The meeting will be held at the John Witherspoon School on Walnut Lane.

The conference theme, "Aging In Place — The Importance of Relationships," will examine the impact of relationships on individuals and on the community. The meeting is sponsored by Community Without Walls, an association of older Princeton area residents, and the Princeton Senior Resource Center.

The conference, which has been officially recognized as a WHCoA activity, is one of 350 official mini-conferences being held throughout the United States and in Puerto Rico. The national conference is authorized to examine common problems facing the generations, to develop specific and comprehensive recommendations for action to maintain and improve the well-being of the aging, and to set forth recommendations for coordinating federal with state and local needs.

Participation at the local level will help shape national policy and change prospects for older people according to Victoria Bergman, one of the founders of CWW. "What happens at the Princeton conference will play a role in shaping this country's policy for the aging over the next decade," she said. "We are hoping to attract people of all ages who are affected by these issues so that we can document their needs and their views on the subject, and pass them on to Washington. It's essential that people living in our area participate so that our voices can be heard."

Ms. Bergman says that the problems associated with aging in place affect everybody; that if the issue is not addressed in a positive fashion at this time the loss of talent to the community will be significant. "What happens to older people affects everybody else," she said. "We would like people to be more aware of the interdependence of generations and the contributions of older individuals to society at large. It's essential that communities develop support systems for aging in place."

The meeting will open with a presentation about current policies that impact aging in place by Judith Parnes, executive director of Elder Life Management of Deal, N.J. Conferees will divide into small groups to examine the issues and develop specific recommendations.

A summary report will be given at the closing, and then forwarded to the White House. "Our input to the Washington conference is critical," says Ms. Bergman. "In fact, it was one of the conditions of recognition by WCHoA."

Registration begins at 1. Registration in advance is $3 per person and $5 for two people. Admission at the door is $5 per person.

A number of scholarship admissions will be available

Choir College Receives $2.5 Million in Pledges

The Hillman Foundation, Inc. and the Carroll and Julia Currin Foundation have announced pledges totaling $2.5 million to Westminster Choir College of Rider University. Based in Pittsburgh, The Hillman Foundation has pledged $1.5 million to Westminster's special gift effort. The Carroll and Julia Currin Foundation, based in North Carolina, has pledged $1 million to the same campaign.

Coupled with an anonymous pledge of $500,000, a $100,000 gift from a Westminster alumnus, and numerous individual gifts from Westminster's other alumni and friends, the Hillman and Currin Foundation pledges bring Westminster within $400,000 of its special gift effort goal of $4.8 million.

Westminster's special gift effort is part of a plan, approved by the Rider University board of trustees in July, to maintain the Westminster program in Princeton and to help it achieve financial viability. Another key element of the plan is increasing Westminster's enrollment by approximately 100 students over the next three years.

While it is too early in the student recruitment cycle to predict the size of incoming classes, acceptances are double what they were at this time last year, and the caliber of students accepted to Westminster for next year appears high.

At its February 9 meeting, the Rider board reviewed the progress of Westminster's fund-raising and student recruitment efforts and was encouraged by the results. "We have set some high goals for ourselves," said Rider President J. Barton Luedeke, in announcing the progress of the Westminster program. "The success of our fund-raising effort indicates how much Westminster Choir College is valued by its alumni, friends and the community.

"We are especially grateful to the Hillman and Currin Foundations for their extraordinary generosity. Their pledges and those of our two other major donors bring us closer to reaching our $4.8

Welfare Issues Topic Of Roundtable Talks

As lawmakers convene in Washington this spring to rework the welfare system, a series of three roundtable discussions entitled "Welfare As We Know It," will be held at Princeton University.

The interdisciplinary panels feature an array of perspectives from academic to activist, and they look at contemporary welfare proposals, assessing not only "the welfare state as we know it," in the words of Bill Clinton, but how we have arrived at that state, and where we can go from here.

The organizers imagine these events as serving some of the same goals for welfare reform that teach-ins played in the years of the Vietnam War.

The roundtables will be comprised of voices based in historical study, sociology, social policy philosophy and analysis, legislative experience, and political activism. This wide interdisciplinary lens, organizers hope, will reveal both the gendered and racially discriminatory reality of our present welfare regime and also the values and social visions that underlie proposals for reform.

The first roundtable, entitled "Who Are the Welfare Mothers?" will examine the realities, as well as the myths, of welfare today. The next discussion will take up "The Question of Entitlements," examining the ideology behind our welfare system. Finally, the third panel will consider "Welfare As We'd Like It to Be."

The first panel will be held on Thursday at 4:30 p.m. in Bowl 5 of Robertson Hall at Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Visiting Professor of History and Women's Studies Sonya Michel will serve as moderator. Ms. Michel, who teaches at the University of Illinois, is working on a book on the history of child care in the United States.

The panel will feature Kathryn Edin, professor of sociology at Rutgers University, who has spent six years of field study on welfare families, as well as the Hon. Roxanne Jones, a Pennsylvania State Senator, former welfare recipient, and activist with the National Welfare Rights Organization.

They will be joined by Felicia Kornbluh, a graduate student in history at Princeton and a former Washington policy analyst who is working on a dissertation on the history of the welfare rights movement, and Sara McLanahan from the Woodrow Wilson School. Ms. McLanahan is a poverty researcher who spent a decade and a half at the Institute for Research on Poverty at the University of Wisconsin.

The dates of the second and third roundtables are Tuesday, March 7, and Thursday, April 13. More information on these events will follow. For more information on the series call Hendrik Hartog, 258-4166, Felicia Kornbluh, 734-9325, or Sonya Michel, 258-4088.

Spring Registration Under Way at YMCA

Spring registration is under way at the Princeton Family YMCA for both Spring 1 and Spring 2 sessions. Spring 1 operates from March 6 to April 30, and Spring 2, from May 1 to June 25.

The YMCA Youth Sports Program offers a youth baseball clinic for boys and girls ages 6 to 8 from March 7 to 29; T-ball for 4- and 5-year-olds from April 1 to June 10, and baseball for 6- and 7-year-olds from April 1 to June 10. The traveling lacrosse team for boys in grades five and six gets under way March 4.

Anyone interested in the aquatics program at the Princeton YMCA is urged to register early for all classes, as they fill quickly. Available are swim lessons for children beginning with ages 6 months on up to 18. Adult Aquatics includes classes in arthritis aerobics, deep water walking, water aerobics, open senior swim, and private and group swim lessons.

The Summer Day Camp program, which operates from June 26 to September 1, is also accepting registration for boys and girls ages 5 to 14. Troop records, such as Court of Honor bulletins and charter lists are needed to help identify former members. A list of former members will be available soon. The troop is seeking memorabilia from former members for display, such as uniforms, badge sashes, flags, and photographs.

Fourth Annual Math Day At P'ton Friends School

Princeton Friends School's Fourth Annual Math Day will be held on Saturday, March 4, from 1:30 to 5 at the school, located at 470 Quaker Road. Pre-registration is required by Friday, February 24.

Princeton Friends faculty and parents, local mathematicians, and friends of the school will lead workshops in topology, probability, math and cooking, tiling, math and music, various games and problems and much more. The program is open to all pupils in grades one through eight with a suggested admission fee of $5. This year there will be a few adult workshops for parents of Math Day attenders as well.

"Math Day is an opportunity to experience the way Princeton Friends School is teaching math, through collaboration, problem solving and projects," said Richard Fischer, faculty member and math teacher at the school. "It's a great way to meet other people who enjoy doing math. In the past some of our workshops have covered topics like knots, optical illusions, codes, and the concept of infinity.

"We've even had workshops related to art and the mixing of colors. Kids have created or built things in many of our workshops — all taking different approaches to learning about math."

Space is limited and early registration is recommended. To register, call 683-1194.

Correction

In an article on George F. Kennan in last week's TOWN TOPICS, the phrase "in the Soviet sphere" incorrectly stated the situation in the Baltic countries of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia at the time Mr. Kennan was there as part of the field work for his study of the Russian language. They were independent countries at the time and were not occupied by the Soviets until 1940 as a result of the Molotov-von Ribbentropp Pact of 1939.

it is set aside for staff and administrative use. In the Princeton Regional School District, students are encouraged to explore computers and the Internet.

Princeton's widespread use of computers in the classroom has made it one of the 30 sites in the nation that have been selected to participate in a study conducted by the Los Alamos Model Nets research program.

The John Witherspoon Middle School is but one of the many schools in the Princeton Regional School District where computers are becoming a popular tool for both students and teachers.

Its well-equipped computer lab is the home base for Ferdi Serim, the computer teacher/coordinator who has helped train students and teachers throughout the district in the use of the new technology.

Creativity and Discipline

Hanging on the wall of the computer lab in the John Witherspoon School is a small black and white photograph of a jazz combo in full swing. It takes only a moment to see that the floppy-jowled trumpet player is the legend, Dizzy Gillespie; a closer look at the drummer in the picture shows why the photo is hanging in the lab.

"He [Gillespie] told me I was a pretty good drummer," says Mr. Serim, with a hint of pride. He played with Gillespie some years ago, while the latter was visiting a school where Mr. Serim was artist-in-residence.

It is with the combination of discipline and creativity common to jazz musicians that Mr. Serim is helping to make computers an important teaching tool at John Witherspoon and all of the other schools in the district.

The John Witherspoon computer lab is the largest and best-equipped in the district, with 24 Macintosh-brand machines. All of the computers are networked, meaning that they can communicate with each other, and all have access to the Internet.

Different classes use the computers for different tasks. A visitor to the lab during any given period might find students researching term papers, doing remedial work with a tutor, or creating computer art for inclusion in a world-wide on-line student art show.

> "The kids are getting much more information than they would otherwise — and they're more into it — they are amazed at what they can find. It gets them excited about the project."

Computers and technology capture the interest of the students, says Mr. Serim. "When you're not pushing your kids all the time, teaching is a different occupation."

When classes change over, the incoming students prove him right. They rush right to the computers, and log on — often beginning their assignments before their teacher arrives.

On the wall outside of the computer lab is a sign-up sheet detailing the times at which different classes will be using the computers over the next two weeks; there are very few empty blocks.

In an effort to make the computers more available to students, Mr. Serim has made a tentative arrangement with the district: he will work only four days per week during school hours, and will make up the extra time by keeping the lab open for students at night.

During the fifth day of every week, says Mr. Serim, he will spend at least part of his own time giving workshops and researching grant proposals that will benefit the schools.

He is also looking into the possibility of training parents and volunteers to use the computers and supervise the lab, so that the hours during which it is open can be increased even further.

Recent cuts in state aid to education mean that if the lab is to be made more accessible, it will have to be done with little or no outlay of school funds.

"Everybody is really nervous right now about making anything else available if it is going to mean a further strain on the dwindling resources of the schools," he says. "So we have to get very creative about how we are able to provide the necessary people and the necessary training."

Research Projects

Every year, the eighth grade students at John Witherspoon are required to complete an interdisciplinary research project that brings together elements of their civics, science, mathematics, and English classes.

The computer lab and the information resources that are available on the Internet are changing the way the students view and complete their projects.

"If you had been able to look at this 10 years ago, you'd never have believed it," says eighth grade science teacher Ron Antoniotti. "There is an unbelievable amount of information on the Internet, if you know where to look."

According to Mr. Antoniotti, the eighth graders used the Internet to a lesser extent last year, before teachers were able to secure frequent access to computers.

This year, use of the Internet has exploded. "The kids are getting much more information than they would have otherwise," he says, "and they're more into it — they're amazed at what they can find. It gets them excited about the project."

At the outset of the project, the students were required to choose a topic relating to the "impact of mankind on nature, or nature on mankind." In the early going, they

ON-LINE: John Witherspoon Middle School civics teacher Rick Miller responds to the question of student Courtney Moore, who was using the Internet to research civil rights issues. In the foreground is Birgitta Jonsdottir, another member of Mr. Miller's class.

In Mr. Miller's eyes, the system's imperfections have a silver lining: the students are forced to be creative in their attempts to find certain information, which often piques their interest even more. "They like exploring," says Mr. Miller.

With the enormous amount of information that is available over the computers, Mr. Miller admits, it is possible for the students to get sidetracked. "But it's the same as in a classroom — it's our job as teachers to go around and make sure that they stay focused on what they are trying to do."

This is the first of three articles focusing on the use of computer networking and the Internet in both the Princeton Regional School District and the Princeton community at large.

These articles will look at the steadily increasing use of computers and computer networks, both in and out of the classroom, as tools for education, communication, and empowerment.

were brought into the computer lab and allowed to "surf the 'net" (a term Mr. Serim dislikes) in an effort to familiarize them with the different research utilities available to them.

"The kids decided on topics and are now doing more focused research," says Mr. Serim.

In their math classes, he says, they explore ways to process the information using spreadsheets and graphics. Civics classes investigate the social and political issues relevant to the students' topics, and the English classes synthesize the information into the actual paper.

"I thought they were done at that point," said Mr. Serim. "But they came back with surveys that they are going to post to other school kids on the Internet."

Everyday Applications

The application of the resources on the Internet is not limited to special projects. Eighth grade civics teacher Rick Miller uses the computer lab in the course of many of his lessons.

"There are some great resources for civics and social studies," he says. "We can get into the White House publications, federal agency records, and the Library of Congress."

As part of a program centering around Black History Month, students in Mr. Miller's class were using the computer labs to look at the Supreme Court records on various landmark civil rights cases. They were also able to retrieve the text of presidential proclamations on civil rights, and to read the charters of government agencies such as the Federal Commission on Civil Rights.

"Ferdi is setting up a great program here," says Mr. Miller, "and naturally it's going to improve as he goes along and as we become more familiar with it."

The resources on the Internet are not perfect, says Mr. Miller. "It's not every day that you go [into the lab] and have every kid find [the necessary information.]"

Sometimes certain resources are being used too heavily and cannot be accessed. Other times, they are not operational at all.

recently signed a lease for the Gillespie building on Clarksville Road, West Windsor, in which he plans to establish a financial center that would include a bank, insurance and mortgage operations and a business broadcasting studio.

Mr. Howley also plans to open a continuing care center for the elderly in the Princeton area. He told TOWN TOPICS that he made one bid to the Bank of New York, which was rejected, and that he made another bid on Tuesday, which he hoped would be accepted.

He said he had an agreement to develop a CCRC with a Fortune 500 company, whose identity he declined to disclose, but he described his proposal as a "high end facility" that would include independent and assisted living units but not a skilled nursing facility. Instead, he would develop a contract with a hospital for nursing care.

"Extraordinary" Demand

Mr. Howley said marketing surveys indicate that the demand for a CCRC in the Princeton area "is extraordinary." He said the facility he is planning would be 80 percent private pay and 20 percent affordable and would be for profit.

Mr. Howley said he did not think the Planning Board officers had "jettisoned" the idea of swapping Tusculum for acreage in Community Park North on which to build a CCRC and expressed confidence that such a facility could be achieved.

He also expressed doubt that the Bank of New York would sell the property to a developer for residential building lots because, as he put it, there is an "oversupply" of luxury homes currently available in Princeton.

He said there are other sites, in Montgomery and Lawrence, as well as in Princeton that he is interested in pursuing.

Meanwhile, plans for a retirement community across Lake Carnegie in Plainsboro are moving through the approval process. Continuum Care Corp. of Needham, Mass. presented plans for a project that will be called The Windrows at Princeton Forrestal Village to the Plainsboro Planning Board on February 6 for concept review.

To be located on a 45-acre tract bordered by St. Joseph's Seminary, Princeton Landing townhouses and Princeton Forrestal Village, the project will feature 101 semi-detached townhouses, 190 apartments, 83 assisted living units and a 190-bed nursing home.

According to David Knights, director of marketing for Princeton Forrestal Center, which has worked closely with Continuum Care in the planning of the project, the concept review went smoothly. The plans were reviewed in December by the Design Review Committee and in January by the Evironmental Commission.

The developer had met several times with the planning staff, and several members of the Planning Board made a trip to Bryn Mawr, Pa., to see a facility called Beaumont in an effort to educate themselves about the planning issues involved in a CCRC.

Residents of Princeton Landing who were present said that most of their concerns about the project had been addressed by the developer. One individual who objected to the layout and the lack of easy pedestrian access to Princeton Forrestal Village was John Bergen, an independent planning consultant who is promoting the development of town centers along the lines endorsed by the State Planning Commission. The board took note of his comments.

According to Mr. Knights, Continuum Care plans to file for preliminary approval for the entire project and final approval for the nursing home and assisted living units in April.

School Staffs Can Help Decrease Bureaucracy

To the Editor, Town Topics:

As a Township resident for nearly 15 years, a taxpayer and a parent, my concerns for the Princeton Regional schools give me reason to run for one of the Township seats on the School Board in the upcoming April election.

Like many parents, I want to see greater accountability across the system for teaching quality, high academic standards, administrative efficacy, and budgetary constraint. I believe we can achieve these goals with a greater effectiveness if we work with our teachers and site administrators. We need to enlist all of our staff in an on-going process of change and reform and call on them to help us uncover waste wherever it may lie.

Apart from promoting a more caring atmosphere, we should also do this because empowerment and inclusion have been shown to be the most effective way to bring about lasting organizational change and substantial cost reduction. Industry has learned this the hard way; we should benefit from the lesson now.

We are beginning an era of great budgetary pressure due to cutbacks in state aid. As a School Board member, I will work hard to reduce unnecessary excesses in central administration. I believe we need to downsize and decentralize the bureaucracy at Valley Road and resist efforts to increase class size or cut academic and co-curricular programs that are central to our children's educational experience.

I appreciate the educational importance of close student-teacher interaction that small class size allows. And as my children are involved in school athletics and music programs, I know first-hand the value of both.

In the coming months, I will elaborate on these concerns and my interests in other areas in greater detail, including planning for integrating new computer and network technologies into our curriculum. During that time, I hope to meet with parents, teachers and administrators and community members to better understand the range of perspectives we have on our children's education and solicit ideas for reducing costs in our District.

I look forward to talking about our hopes and concerns and I welcome your suggestions.

Council Should Change Consolidation Study Vote

To the Editor, Town Topics:

I write to compliment Barbara Johnson for her profile of George Kennan (February 15) and his thoughts on living in Princeton 40 years. Her clarity and sensitivity in writing about one of the most respected men of the 20th century is a credit to her and TOWN TOPICS.

It is no blot on that praise to say that I was interested, as a full-time opponent of consolidation and one part-time spokesman for Preserve Our Historic Borough, the group that successfully defeated the attempt to remove Princeton Borough's identity in 1991. I refer in particular to the following two paragraphs in the article:

"I have observed at close proximity the efforts made to preserve the nature of the Borough in particular as it existed in the past and as it took its expression in certain traditions. I think what has been accomplished is very, very good, exceptionally good, considering urban development in this country generally. I am ... encouraged about this.

"I think the fact that the center of Princeton, despite all the contrary pressures that have been exerted against it has remained and has retained its vitality and has an active and interesting life of its own, is quite an achievement. I give credit to all the people who have been on the various committees and planning boards..."

I have no doubt that the proponents of consolidation claim and will claim that they too expect to "preserve" the Borough's "expression in certain traditions." In this, as Professor Kennan implies, by identifying "excessive urbanism" as one of the "greatest developing problems" of the day, they are bound to fail. Urbanism has a life and force of its own; it can only be resisted early and firmly. Long after the present incumbents are gone, Urbanism will be alive and take its toll on the "vitality of the center of Princeton."

His praise for "boards and committees" must refer to the joint boards the Borough and Township operate to resolve common problems. Why change this successful arrangement and risk destruction of character?

In the present political circumstances of a Borough Council-led renewed effort to do just that on February 28, I call upon Councilwomen Mildred Trotman and Sandra Starr to change their vote to "no" on principle to the formation of a commission to study consolidation (urbanism). (I believe they are the "swing" votes on the issue.)

I further call upon Mayor Marvin Reed to cast the deciding "no" vote in the event of tie vote.

This is particularly important for the Democratic Party at this time, even disregarding national politics. The present move to consolidate is government-led, not citizen-inspired, and since Borough Council is composed of all Democrats, it is apparently a platform plank of that party. It now risks the danger of being known for favoring urbanism and opposing small-town values.

In the meantime, I welcome George Kennan to the growing ranks of Princeton residents who favor keeping a firm identity for Princeton Borough.

Merging Borough & Township Schools Began 'Administrative Bloat' in Early '60s

To the Editor of Town Topics:

It seems to me that it is time to stop whining over the cut in State aid for the school district and start working to correct the excess administrative costs.

This is not a new problem. It has been with us since the early 1960s when we merged an excellent Township school system with a good Borough system and produced a very mediocre system with soaring costs per pupil and dramatically lower standards. Unfortunately, my own children were caught up in it at that time.

It seems the larger, more complex system required an army of assistants for all sorts of new positions and then, of course, a new level of upper management to oversee the whole thing.

As school budgets increased far in excess of inflation each year, I began to do the unforgivable. I took the budget, divided it by the enrollment, and arrived at a per capita cost that was on a par with a full year at Harvard, then the most expensive private school in the country.

All the educational experts get upset with this sort of bottom line comparison and they will give you a hundred rationalizations why this is an unfair thing to do, but it certainly illustrates that there is something wrong.

Congratulations to Mr. Mahon for his excellent letter on this subject in your last issue [TOWN TOPICS, February 15].

The administrative bloat in the joint school system should also give the consolidation forces pause for thought. It is one of the many reasons for the Township to reject consolidation if it comes to still another vote. I have never heard of a government agency that grew larger and unit costs went down!

Shared Living Quarters Need Locked Bedrooms

To the Editor, Town Topics:

Following is a copy of a letter which I have sent to Borough Mayor and Council:

With regard to a recent development where it was found by the Princeton Borough Zoning Officer that 240 John Street was being occupied as a rooming house, I would like to contribute the following.

Some years ago Princeton Borough Attorney Robin Johnson apprized me of the fact that locks on room doors would not be allowed. I naturally assumed that she meant that a house may not be divided into rooms or separate apartments by closing a door between two parts of a house and then locking that door and "throwing away the key." This is what is commonly meant by "no locked doors" in housing code enforcement across the Northeast and elsewhere.

In fact, almost any New Jersey State Inspector will require a full panoply of locks, peephole and safety chain on any room that looks like it may be used as a bedroom and where access may be gained by unrelated persons. This is in keeping with the New Jersey Constitution which provides specifically for the safety and welfare of the citizens of New Jersey.

If a bedroom cannot be locked and the unit is shared legally, then the situation could arise that the apartment entrance door is left ajar or the share is simply invaded by a malefactor and a young woman occupying the room could be made the victim of assault or rape by not being able to lock her door properly.

Otherwise, she just may have to live tensely and in fear at not being able to lock her door.

Landlords will "get off easily" if the Borough does not, in fact, require such locks on all bedroom doors where unrelated live in common.

If, however, it is the purpose of this Borough Administration to attack the poor in their living arrangements, then it may disregard this letter and continue to insist on a reduced standard of security in shared apartments and houses as such may discourage sharing especially if a tragedy befalls a sharer, such as a rape or assault, by him or her not having been allowed to secure their rooms, and this is widely publicized.

Preserve Institute Woods; Don't Burden Taxpayers

To the Editor, Town Topics:

After a recent Township Committee meeting, there may have been some confusion about the status of the Institute Woods. I write to clear up any misperceptions and make some suggestions.

It appears that the Institute Woods will be preserved from development thanks to the hard work of the State, the County, the Township, the Institute and the Committee to Preserve the Institute Woods — a group of dedicated local citizens and environmental groups. The final documents have not been drawn up, however, and I think it appropriate to make some suggestions.

Last week the Township Committee merely voted to accept a loan and approve a legal arrangement that will allow the process to move forward. It was a vital step, but not the final step in the long process of crafting a legal agreement and raising funds that will preserve the Institute Woods.

I have only two paramount concerns, and I think they are shared by all residents of Princeton: 1) that the Institute Woods be forever preserved in a natural state; and 2) that the burden on taxpayers be minimized.

My reasons for expressing reservations about the agreements reached to date between various parties and the Institute is that the current proposal, as I understand it does not yet fully achieve these objectives.

What is contemplated is not the sale of the Insitute Woods, but rather that the rights to develop the Institute Woods would be sold. The Township, along with other parties, would purchase these development rights for the price of $16.3 million. (The Township's share is only $1.7 million).

A "conservation easement" would be created that would attach to the deed of the property and prevent any development no matter who owned the property. The Institute would retain the underlying land, and the right to sell it at a future date.

My concern with this arrangment is that although it prevents building homes on the Institute Woods permanently, it may allow activity in the Woods that citizens find objectionable. For example, the current agreements would permit the building of soccer fields or other recreational facilities in the Woods.

The current agreement also would allow uses that citizens would not approve of: paintball games, motorcycles, etc. Of course, the Institute, as long as it owns the land, would not permit these uses. But some day the Institute might have to sell the land and then the community would be left unprotected. This is the type of contingency that should be avoided. So I will be pressing for greater use restrictions in the final agreement over the Woods.

My second concern is with the price paid for the development rights. Sixteen million dollars is quite a large amount to pay, when only the development rights, not the property, is sold. To ensure that taxpayers will receive good value for this intangible interest, I will continue to advocate that the Institute accept a reduction in the purchase price.

My theory for this position is that although the Institute has an estimate that the development rights are worth $16 million, other estimates show the property worth only $10 million. Moreover I imagine the figure would be much lower if bids were actually solicited.

In the alternative, I will suggest that other parties contribute to the purchase price so that the burden on the Township taxpayers is not as high. The Borough, for example, might consider making a contribution because Borough residents also benefit from the Woods.

I think that Princeton University should pay a large portion of the final contract price. I say this as a graduate who used the woods as a student and continues to use the woods. I understand that some University classes use the Woods for Observation and that the track team occasionally uses the Woods — not to mention faculty and alumni.

Everyone in Princeton benefits from the Woods. But the fact of the matter is that the Township and other government entities asked to pay the lion's share of the Institute Woods purchase price are broke. By comparison, the Institute and the University enjoy sumptuous endowments in the hundreds of millions.

I am not suggesting that the Institute and the University tap into their endowments. Indeed, the Institute has already generously offered to help raise funds. But there may be a golden fund-raising opportunity here for both institutions. The Institute Woods have national significance as a nature preserve and as a historic site that was closely involved in the Battle of Princeton: members of the Historical Society of Princeton tell me that approaches to and from the battle were made through the woods.

I believe the University and the Institute — if they put their top fund-raising people on this project — could actually reach new donors who are interested in conservation and history and who don't ordinarily think of giving to academic institutions. In the long run, the University and the Institute might benefit if new donors were impressed by the historic and environmental vision of these institutions. If other alumni in town who are interested in the Woods would convey to the University and the Institute the importance of this project, we may all be able to work together to achieve a worthy goal.

However it is handled, my focus will remain to lower the burden on the taxpayer and to craft an agreement that provides maximum protection for a unique environmental and historical site. I hope others will join.

Gallup Institute's Goal to Find New Approaches to Social Issues

"Polling's major contribution has been to provide an ongoing referendum on the issues of the day, which is vital in a democracy. And also, it not only discovers what people think, but what is in their hearts."

Long-time Princeton resident George Gallup, Jr. is certainly closely associated with polling. The Gallup Poll, started by his father, the late George H. Gallup, in 1935, has become a household word, and polls are now a pervasive part of American life.

Polling techniques and methodology have come a long way since the early days, reports Mr. Gallup.

"There has been great progress in the polling field, especially in expansion overseas — it has really reached 90% of the surveyable world. We operate in 50 countries, and we can get a sense of global opinion very quickly now. We have also achieved a high level of accuracy. There are new ways of analyzing the data, and there is the tremendous speed with which you can look at the data — these are important developments."

Despite these advances, he notes that polls have sometimes not gone beyond superficial opinions to probe underlying thinking. As he explains, "A big gap has been the failure to dig beneath the surface and explore the inner life. This has essentially been ignored. This requires more depth and gets into motivational aspects behind the opinion, and it is also a way to explore the spiritual dimension."

New Solutions

The desire to look more deeply into people's attitudes over a wide spectrum of issues, and to seek solutions to society's problems resulted in the establishment in 1988 of the nonprofit George H. Gallup International Institute. Headquartered at 47 Hulfish Street, it seeks to discover, test, and encourage application of new approaches to social problems in education, the environment, health, religion, and values.

As Mr. Gallup explains, the Institute stems from his father's view that finding new ideas and new solutions is just as important as the search to discover public opinion. "Dad thought the creative function of polling could be enhanced to search out new ideas, and then explore them in surveys to see whether the public accepts or rejects them."

A typical Institute project develops in three stages. (1) Discovery — finding a promising idea and developing it through discussion with experts and interviews with target groups; (2) testing — placing the idea before the puhlic to determine its acceptability hy means of qualitative and quantitative surveys, and (3) dissemination — distrihution of the survey results to the public and to individuals with authority to ensure that policy action can result and that potential solutions are not ignored or overlooked.

Recent Institute projects have included "Drug Use and Government Policy In America"; "American Confidence in Government Bodies to Solve Social Problems and Willingness of Citizens to Seek Political Office"; "Factors in Suicide Rates Among Teenagers"; and the "Health of the Planet" (a global study of attitudes toward the environment, which was presented by Mr. Gallup at the 1992 Earth Summit in Rio de Janeiro).

Closer to home, the Institute also investigated the needs of the elderly in Princeton, a study conducted for the Joint Commission on Aging. "Foundations for Learning in 12 Nations" was a project undertaken with the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Growing Up Scared

The Institute has also recently established The Gallup Institute Fellows, a core group of 100 men and women in leadership positions in many fields. They will be instrumental in carrying out the Institute's mission, and will attend a seminar in Princeton this June, which will address education for leadership.

The Institute also publishes a series of publications, including Youthviews, the newsletter of the Gallup Youth Survey.

A new book, Growing Up Scared in America, is also the result of an Institute study. It takes a look at today's youth, their fears, and risk behavior. As Mr. Gallup says, "They're scared about drugs, alcohol, violence, and even uncertain about nutrition. And they're uneasy about the future."

Although such surveys indicate substantial anxiety, and indeed there is much to worry about both for kids and adults in this new and unsettling era, Mr. Gallup also sees positive signs. People may be skeptical and disappointed, especially about politics and domestic and world affairs, but they still have hope.

"In some ways, people are keenly disappointed, and they don't want politics as usual," he notes. "That they wanted a change was demonstrated in the last election. But I don't think people are despondent. They're apprehensive. The world has changed. They don't see Russia as a threat now, but the rest of the world is so complicated, and there are many pressing problems at home. But Americans have always felt they can turn problems around. They are basically optimistic."

In addition, Mr. Gallup says surveys show stronger interest in spiritual matters on the part of Americans of all ages. He is especially gratified to see this in view of his own long-standing, deep religious convictions.

Religious values have played an important part in his life. A religion major at Princeton University, he surveyed Americans' belief in God in his senior thesis, and he later considered joining the Episcopal Ministry.

However, as he recalls, "you can serve God in many ways, and I thought polling could be my ministry."

In 1977, together with Dr.

Gallup Institute

Miriam Murphy, a Sister of the Order of Notre Dame, he established the Princeton Religion Research Center (now also located at 47 Hulfish Street), whose purpose is to explore through scientifically conducted surveys, the nature, depth and impact of religion in the U.S. and abroad.

Spiritual Renewal

He points out that surveys have indicated Americans are "beginning to break away from their secular chains, and that we are, indeed, in a period of spiritual renewal.

"We were probably the first in the country to explore the religious experience, including near death experiences," he continues. "There is a tremendous surge of interest in spirituality. This doesn't exclude interest in traditional beliefs. It's all a part of the overall concern for things spiritual. It stems from a rejection of materialism and the struggle with the difficulties of modern life.

"The stark fact, however, is that most Americans don't know what they believe or why. And these people can be very vulnerable to any movement that comes along. But now they are searching with new intensity and are also trying to create deeper relationships with each other. This is similar to the first step in recovery with an addiction or severe problem, when people have reached the end of their emotional resources. They look for a higher power. And indeed, the vast majority of the world believes in God."

Regarding the variety of different faiths prevalent today and the sometimes strident assertions of belief, he notes, "I applaud pluralism in the U.S. The emphasis is not to rule out differences, but a healthy situation is where each faith can speak out loudly on the issues. When the faith is not grounded in knowledge, however, people can become very defensive. People who are very strong in their faith are not argumentative or defensive."

Mr. Gallup refers to a recent book, The Saints Among Us, which he co-authored with Timothy Jones. It describes a group of Americans from all walks of life, all age groups, and different denominations, who demonstrate character and commitment, are often the backbone of their community, and who are distinguished by a strong faith, which has been deepened by the difficulties they have encountered.

POLLING & PREDICTIONS: "If there is a center for polling in the world, it has to be Princeton. There must be 17 research organizations here," says George Gallup Jr. He should know. His late father started it all with The Gallup Poll in 1935, and now Mr. Gallup oversees two important Princeton firms, The George H. Gallup International Institute and the Princeton Religion Research Center, which utilize survey techniques. He is also co-chairman of The Gallup Organization, which is now owned by the Selection Research Institute.

Manual for Living

"The fact of the matter is, as polling techniques have discovered, people who have deep faith are different than other people," says Mr. Gallup. "They are more tolerant, more charitable, more interested in the betterment of society, more giving and forgiving, and far happier."

Mr. Gallup has co-authored a total of 10 books, as well as written the forward and introduction for others, including the recent book, Minding the Whole Person, by Princeton physician, William Haynes. "I want to recommend this to everyone," says Mr. Gallup. "This book is not only a manual for living, it is also a guide to a full and meaningful life."

His work as executive director of the Princeton Religion Research Center and chairman of the George H. Gallup International Institute often involves extensive travel and speaking engagements. In addition, he and his wife Kingsley Gallup give talks together for various church groups. "Her heart is in covenant groups, where small groups of people come together to share their needs and troubles with other people," he explains. "It's an important way to deepen people's faith."

Public speaking has come to be a pleasure for Mr. Gallup, as his affable manner suggests, but it was not always the case. "When I was younger, I was terrified of this sort of thing," he confides, "but now I've really come to enjoy it."

He attributes the change to his experience in an amateur town-gown Gilbert & Sullivan production at McCarter Theatre in 1961. Center stage took on a new look for him when he appeared as Pooh Bah in The Mikado, and he has performed in numerous amateur and local productions over the years.

Living in Princeton continues to be a pleasure, despite the many changes he has witnessed since he first arrived in 1933. "It was just a small country town then," he recalls, "and now it has become a place for headquarters of big business, as well as a center for a variety of broad research. The charms of Princeton became known, and development followed. But it is still a good place to be."

He lives on the original family farm, built by his father, and he adds that the 300-plus acres have become part of the Farmland Preservation Program, and cannot be developed.

He is pleased that a new generation of Gallups have become involved in the "family business" or related activities: son George IV is the managing director of the Princeton Religion Research Center, daughter Alison was formerly involved in the Center, and is now working to become a Christian counselor, and daughter Kingsley is studying to be a teacher.

Reflecting on his own career, he says that he is glad that his time has been spent on what he believes is important. "It is the opportunity for discovery that polling has provided. Finding new and exciting ideas and getting further insight into human nature are some of the real benefits of this work. And for me, especially, the findings into the area of the inner life are significant, and then seeing that the findings are contributing to positive change. This is challenging and worthwhile, and I feel that I am serving God in my work."

New Wave Juggler Coming to McCarter

Michael Moschen, the foremost practitioner of the poetry of juggling — and the first juggler to win a "genius" award from the MacArthur Foundation, will perform at McCarter Theatre on Tuesday at 8.

Mr. Moschen's juggling combines physics, movement, dance and music to create a world of balls, rings, hoops and spheres that fly, float and spin with grace, humor and haunting beauty. "This remarkable artist defies description as he incorporates sound, acrobatics, magic, science and visual philosophy creating a show full of non-stop wonder," stated William W. Lockwood, McCarter's Special Programming Director.

A veteran of Big Apple Circus and Cirque du Soleil, Mr. Moschen's credits include PBS' Great Performances and Sesame Street.

Tickets are $18, $19, $21 and $22. Tickets for students and children are available for $7 each. To charge tickets by phone, call the box office at 683-8000.

Film and Video Festival Sponsored by Alliance

Queer Articulations 1995, Fifth Princeton Film and Video Festival will run from Thursday to Sunday.

Highlights of the festival, which is sponsored by the Princeton University Leshian Gay Bisexual Alliance (LGBA), include presentations by Rose Troche and Guinevere Turner, the makers and star of last summer's leshian hit, Go Fish; and Todd Haynes, winner of the Grand Jury prize of the 1991 Sundance Film Festival for his film Poison.

Mr. Haynes will present his critically acclaimed Dottie Gets Spanked (1994), and will discuss his newest film, Safe, which premiered at the 1995 Sundance Festival in January. Ms. Troche will present a rare screening of her earlier short films from "The Gabriella Series," including Let's Go Back to My Apartment and Have Sex.

A wide variety of narrative and experimental short films will be shown at the festival ranging in scope from classics like Jean Genet's Un Chant d'Amour (1950) and Kenneth Anger's Fireworks (1947), to recent festival favorites like Cheryl Dunye's Greetings from Africa and Aaron Kilc's The History of Western Sexuality to Maria Beatty and Rosemary Delain's provocative and postmodern The Elegont Spanking.

Screenings will take place at 50 McCosh Hall and at 185 Nassau Street on the Princeton University campus. All events are free and open to the public.

Culturally Diverse Cast For MCCC's 'Our Town'

Mercer County Community College will present a culturally diverse production of Thornton Wilder's Our Town on March 3, 4, 10 and 11 at 8 p.m., and March 5 and 12 at 4. The classic American drama will be staged in Kelsey Theatre on MCCC's West Windsor campus, 1200 Old Trenton Road, West Windsor.

The performance features Mercer students and staff directed by Terrence Sherman. The play is presented in the context of a theater rehearsal taking place in 1995, as opposed to Wilder's original production where actors donned corsets, knickers, fancy hats and other period attire.

The Gibbs family includes an African-American mother, an Italian-American father, a Cuban son, and an Anglo-Saxon daughter. Mr. Sherman feels the cast selection will provide a test of the accepted universality of Wilder's work by offering another view of it.

His decision to change the setting of Our Town was due, in large part, to the culturally diverse cast. "Our ethnically mixed group looks less out of place sustaining the illusion of a 1995 rehearsal than they do walking about in period costumes," he said.

Tickets, priced at $9 for adults and $7 for students, senior citizens and children, may be ordered by calling 584-9444.

With music, book and lyrics by Robert Nassif Lindsey, the musical is about a little girl who was the only known survivor of a shipwreck off the coast of Oregon in 1904. Speaking in broken English riddled with strange words and wearing tattered remnants of rich fabrics, she is taken in by the workers of a lumbercamp, deep in the forests of Oregon.

Ten-year-old Jackie Angelescu of Ridgefield portrays the title role in the George Street Playhouse production. After completing the national tour of Annie, Ms. Angelescu went on to appear in Annie Worbucks at Variety Arts Theatre in New York City. Television credits include "All My Children," "Guiding Light," and guest appearances on Nickelodeon.

Marni Nixon portrays Sadie McKibben, the lumber camp washerwoman who befriends the young girl. Ms. Nixon performed the film and soundtrack vocal work for Natalie Wood in West Side Story, Deborah Kerr in The King and I and An Affair to Remember and Audrey Hepburn in My Fair Lady. Ms. Nixon has done extensive work in musical theatre starring in regional productions of My Fair Lady, South Pacific, The King and I, The Sound of Music and Thank Heaven for Lerner & Laewe.

Mr. Lindsey received the Richard Rodgers Production Award for Opal in 1991. He has spent three years composing an opera with Arthur Miller, developed projects with Joe Papp and Hal Prince and has been contracted to write music and lyrics for a screen play by Disney Feature Animation and is working with them on a new film.

Opal is directed and choreographed by Lynne Taylor-Corbett, who has directed and/or choreographed for theatre, dance and film.

Opal runs through Sunday, March 19. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 and Sundays at 2 and 7, with additional 2 p.m. matinees on Saturday, March 11 and 18.

Ticket prices range from $18 to $30. Student, senior citizen and group discounts are available. For ticket information call the box office at (908) 246-7717 Tuesday through Friday from 10 to 6 and Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5. TDD users may call (908) 846-0825.

Princeton Pro Musica "Feels the Spirit" Singing with Harlem Spiritual Ensemble

Princeton Pro Musica brought a rare brand of entertainment to Princeton High School on Saturday night as Frances Slade and her 100-voice chorus presented the internationally-acclaimed Harlem Spiritual Ensemble in a concert celebrating Black History Month. The six-voice ensemble, under the direction of Francois Clemmons, performed a variety of spirituals and gospel numbers, as well as a commissioned cantata based on the writings of Sojourner Truth and Harriet Tubman.

In a vocal ensemble of six, the character and timbre of each voice takes on increased importance. The three women and three men who comprise the Harlem Spiritual Ensemble possess an eclectic group of voices, ranging from the light and clear soprano of Janet Jordan to the booming low bass of Richard Bellazin.

Conductor Clemmons introduced each piece to the standing-room-only crowd at the high school, and the music selected represented a broad range of gospel and spiritual arrangements from the past century. Some selections, such as "Motherles' Chile" and "Balm in Gilead," are among the most familiar to contemporary audiences, while others, such as "Turn Me 'Round," represent significant pieces in African-American choral repertory, but are not as well-known

"You Better Min," the first piece following the processional introduction, is a traditional call-and-response gospel arrangement, and gave each singer a chance to vocally introduce him or herself to the audience. It was during this number that one became aware of the diversity within the ensemble.

Sopranos Janet Jordan and Stephanie Beadle possess very different voices, with Ms. Beadle singing in a more dramatic and heavy style. The real vocal "sleeper" in the ensemble was mezzo-soprano La'Shelle Allen, who could have provided more sound in the ensemble singing, but really shone in her solo songs, such as this first number, and later in the chilling "Turn Me 'Round."

Mr. Clemmons had a busy night as conductor, narrator and singer — providing the top tenor to the three-part men's singing. Baritone Raymond Frith was slightly overpowered at times during his primary solo number, "The Angel Rolled the Stone Away," but added a core sound to the men's ensemble singing. Bass Richard Bellazin stole the show in his numbers, most notably "Ev'ry Time I Feel the Spirit."

During several numbers sung by both choruses combined, conducted by Mr. Clemmons, the Harlem Ensemble encouraged Princeton Pro Musica to connect choral singing and movement. "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray," featuring mezzo-soprano Sandra Austin, combined the solid vocal sound of Pro Musica with a relaxed style of performance aided by the rhythmic swaying of gospel singing.

The other three numbers performed together — "I Wanna Be Ready," "Ev'ry Time I Feel the Spirit," and "Go Tell It on the Mountain," — were sung with style and verve by Pro Musica and featured different members of the Spiritual Ensemble as soloists.

Sisters of Freedom, a cantata based on the lives and writings of Sojourner Truth (Isabella Baumfree Hardenberg) and Harriet Tubman, was commissioned by a number of different agencies throughout the United States. With music by Linda Twine and lyrics by Frances Harper, this dramatic work combines opera, spirituals, gospel, and narration to reflect the fight of Sojourner Truth and Harriet Tubman against slavery. A number of different scenarios are depicted through music and text, including a slave auction and street corner speeches by Sojourner Truth.

All of the members of the Harlem Spiritual Ensemble displayed their classical and operatic training throughout the cantata, with Mr. Bellazin, especially, giving the impression that the role of the auctioneer was written specifically for him. The gospel and spiritual tunes used are traditional melodies, emotionally connecting the audience with the horrific stories being told. The work is part song, part lecture, reflecting the importance of music in the lives of the two women.

Sisters of Freedom is a significant work representing the darkest side of American history, and the Spiritual Ensemble captivated its Princeton audience with the drama and music of the piece.

The Harlem Spiritual Ensemble tours extensively throughout the United States and abroad, musically preserving African-American heritage. Princeton Pro Musica meaningfully observed Black History Month by bringing this ensemble to Princeton (not only for this concert, but also for school programs in the community), achieving a dual goal of high-quality performance and public education.

Music

Ms. Migdal began the study of piano in her native Russia at the age of 8, but it wasn't until she was in her early teens that she heard a number of Russian master pianists in live performance. That experience, combined with hearing pianists her own age who studied at Moscow's special music schools, helped her realize that "music could be taken to a whole new level." She decided when she was 13 that being a concert pianist was "what I had to do."

A graduate of Princeton High School, who has been in the United States about six years, the young virtuoso will play an ambitious program. It includes Beethoven's Sonata in C Minor (Pathetique), Brahms' Rhapsody in G Minor, and Chopin's Ballade in A-flat Major.

ART

Contemporary Artists To Speak at University

A series of free talks by contemporary artists are under way at Princeton University. Organized by Caroline Jones, a member of the School of Social Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Study and a visiting lecturer in the Visual Arts Program at Princeton University, the talks are open to the public and take place at 4:30 in the Film Theater at 185 Nassau Street.

On Tuesday, Perry Roberman will be the speaker. Mr. Roberman began his career as an art director and projection systems designer for performance artist Laurie Anderson. According to Ms. Jones, his innovative use of simple technological systems represents a real-time, real-space alternative to the elaborate and expensive virtual reality complexes now receiving so much press. Mr. Roberman's recent installations use electric switches, bar code information systems and karaoke feedback loops to confront and critique our relationship to these everyday technologies.

Lorna Simpson will be featured on Tuesday, March 7. In her cool photographic and textual ensembles, Ms. Simpson blurs gender boundaries while also questioning assumptions about race and subjectivity, according to Ms. Jones.

The series continues on Tuesday, March 28, with Mel Chin, a Houston-born sculptor, and with painters Peter Halley and Mark Tansey on April 4 and April 11, respectively.

Small Works Sought For Annual Juried Show

The Arts Council has announced its seventh annual juried show of "Small Works," to be exhibited at the Arts Council, from Saturday, March 11, through the end of March. The juror this year is Michael Bzdak, curator of the Johnson and Johnson Corporate art collection.

Artists working in any media are invited to submit work not exceeding 12 inches in any dimension. Deadline for entries is Saturday, March 4, and more information can be obtained by calling the Arts Council at 924-8777.

Exhibits

As a benefit for the Arts Council, Chris and Tanya Martin will present wood prints by their father, Stefan Martin, who is internationally known for his nature scenes and portraits. The opening reception will take place Sunday from 4 to 6 p.m. at the Arts Council WPA Gallery. Accompanying the reception will be a demonstration workshop and slide presentation of wood engraving technique by Chris Martin from 3 to 4 p.m., and a guest musical performance by Shattered Butterfly from 4 to 6.

After graduating from Hightstown High School and receiving his degree from the Art Institute of Chicago, Mr. Martin apprenticed at the Sander Wood Engraving Co. and then lived in East Windsor and Roosevelt. His work can be seen at many museums, including the Museum of Modern Art, the Metropolitan Museum, the Library of Congress and the Smithsonian.

His clients included Scientific American, and The Wall Street Journal, as well as publishers such as Doubleday and W.W. Norton. His work pictures buildings such as the Princeton Chapel, Nassau Hall, Woodrow Wilson School, and Jadwin Gym at Princeton University.

Shattered Butterfly's folk rock performance will include popular covers, as well as originals. Sandy Baez, Charlie Bataglio, Al Lizak, Amy Sherman, and Rob Witkowski make up this five-member band. Shattered Butterfly has been described as "an uplifting rock experience."

The exhibit is in memory of Mr. Martin, who passed away this past fall. A percentage of all gallery proceeds will go to the Arts Council. The Arts Council of Princeton's WPA Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 12 to 5 p.m. The show will run from February 25 through March 3.

current exhibition in the Milberg Gallery for the Graphic Arts contrasts old and new Japanese prints with some 50 examples of original Japanese woodcuts, engravings, and lithographs, sometimes with ludicrous effect.

A public lecture, "Woodcuts and Bookmaking" by Naoka Matsubara, modern Japanese printmaker, will take place at 4:30 p.m. Monday in the Graphic Arts Collection of the University Library.

Both the exhibition and lecture are open to the public. Graphic Arts and the gallery are located on the second floor of Rare Books and Special Collections, Firestone Library. The exhibition will be on view until April 16.

From Friday, March 3, through Friday, March 31, the Norbert Considine Gallery at Stuart Country Day School will feature "The Rosie Period," an exhibition of still-life paintings by David Bush. The exhibition and the artist's reception on Friday, March 3, from 5 to 8 p.m. are free and open to the public.

Mr. Bush's recent artistic efforts include nailing shoes to trees and poles in the Princeton area over the past few years. He has been an artist-in-residence at the Arts Council of Princeton since 1988.

Since viewing the "Picasso and Things" exhibit at the Philadelphia Art Museum in 1992, Mr. Bush has been profoundly influenced by Picasso. "I felt an uncommon willingness to be directly influenced hy a famous artist, and used him as a springboard for still-life paintings which incorporate an interplay of observation and invention," he said.

Mr. Bush lives in Hopewell. He has a B.A. from Rutgers and a B.F.A. from the University of Kansas. He was a diver for the U.S. Olympics team in Munich in 1972.

"Monographic Transfer Paintings and Computer Generated Watermedia Paintings," an exhibit of work by Bonnie Lhotka, will be at The Williams Gallery, 8 Chambers Street, through March 25.

Ms. Lhotka has created a new process, called monograph transfer, which enables her to create a wide range of imagery from abstract to realistic. Transferring the work from a plate to linen canvas using a one-step method, she creates unique painted tapestries of nearly unlimited size.

Internationally renowned artist and printer Jacob Landau, a Roosevelt resident, will juror Trenton State College's 1995 National Printmaking Exhibition. The opening day reception is set for Wednesday, February 22, from 5 to 7 p.m. in the College Art Gallery in Holman Hall on the TSC campus. The exhibition, coordinated by TSC art faculty member Charles McVicker will run until March 29, and will showcase the printmaking of artists from around the country.

Mr. Landau, whose works were most recently displayed in a two-man show with Ben Shahn at the New Jersey State Museum, is professor emeritus at Pratt Institute and the recipient of many awards.

The College Art Gallery is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 12 to 3, Monday to Friday; 7 to 9 p.m. on Thursday; and 1 to 3 on Sunday. For more information call 771-2198 or 771-2652.

Artworks is showcasing the recent photographic work of Barbara K. Suomi at Small World Coffee, Witherspoon Street. The exhibit, which runs through March 1, is part of an ongoing series of exhibits presented by Artworks at various locations throughout Mercer County.

The exhibit of 25 color photographs represents a body of work clompleted over the last three years, in a variety of subjects from food to architecture, street scenes to abstracts. They often have an old-world feel, reflecting Ms. Suomi's travels throughout Europe and Asia.

Ms. Suomi, a graduate of Cornell University, has been employed at Educational Testing Service since 1980.

It's Now or Never for Tiger Hockey to Make Its Move; Four Games Remain to Secure a Good Spot for Playoffs

SPORTS

What will the final story written about the 1994-95 Princeton hockey team say about it?

Will these Tigers be praised for at long last raising the sport at the University to a new level, or will they be remembered as a squad that played like world beaters one night and wimps the next, and couldn't win the games that counted most? After months of giving their fans fits with this roller coaster season, the time to put up or shut up has arrived.

Last weekend's play was typical of others before it. Hurt by suddenly shaky goaltending, the Orange and Black succumbed to 11th-place Union Friday night, 7-4. The following evening coach Don Cahoon's troops regrouped sufficiently to squeeze out a 2-2 tie with a stronger RPI sextet. But the scant one point they brought home didn't help much, dropping them from sixth to seventh place in the tightly bunched ECAC standings.

Facing Old Nassau this weekend are its final two home opponents, Cornell at 7:30 Friday night, and Colgate at 4 PM. Saturday afternoon. (Note that time, we're only going to say it once, if you show up at 7 you can watch the women play their game.) The chance is there for Princeton to pick up four points and virtually assure itself of a decent playoff spot, but it won't be easy. Colgate, whom Princeton has already defeated twice, is 8-1-2 in its last 11 games.

One more road trip to finish the regular season will remain at that point, a trip to Vermont and Dartmouth, March 3-4. With pluck or luck or a combination of both, the Tigers would hope to get at least two points there.

If six points seems too much to ask, how about four, half the number Old Nassau will be playing for over the next two weeks? Just two victories in the remaining four games will assure this team (12-9-4 overall) of becoming the first since 1967-68 to finish with an overall winning record, no matter what happens in the playoffs.

And how about those playoffs? Sure we'd all like to see a fourth place finish and two home games for the quarterfinals. That would give Princeton the best chance of winning at least one game in a quarterfinal round, something it has never accomplished. Fifth or sixth place would enable the Tigers to skip a preliminary contest on Tuesday, March 7, and put them against the third- or fourth-place finisher.

Seventh or eighth place would put them at home on that Tuesday against the ninth- or 10th-place team, and ninth or 10th place would mean another playoff road game, just like they have had the last three years under Cahoon. That last possibility would make success in the playoffs the most difficult to achieve.

We're guessing eight points will bring fourth place, six will mean fifth or sixth, four will lock in seventh or eighth, and anything less, perish the thought, will mean ninth, tenth or lower.

HE LEADS THE TIGERS: Jonathan Kelley's 18 goals is tops for the Princeton hockey team, and the Tigers will need more from him in the final four games.

"We can be third or 12th, it's in our hands," commented co-captain Ian Sharp Saturday night. Indeed it is, and once into the playoffs, anything could happen. Look at the results from last weekend — Cornell and Colgate both knocked off first place Clarkson in Potsdam, and Dartmouth and Vermont both beat Harvard, which has scored only one goal in its last seven periods.

The next three weekends will tell the story for this Princeton hockey team, and whether it will be remembered or forgotten in the years to come.

A Tale of 3 Goolies

The loss to Union was a story of three goalies, one hot, two not. Neither James Konte, who played the first and third periods, or Erasmo Salterelli who replaced him in the second, could match Union's Trevor Koenig. The freshman netminder stopped 46 of 50 shots, while the Tiger goalies missed seven of the Dutchmen's 32 shots.

The home team had two goals against Konte in the first, and another against Salterelli early in second before Mervin Kopeck finally got the Tigers on the scoreboard. Two more tallies by the winners, sandwiched around Ethan Early's first of two, left Princeton looking at a 5-2 deficit to start the third.

A power play tally by Jonathan Kelley to start the third and Early's second at 10:36 gave hopes of a rousing comeback, but that has not been the Tigers' style this year. When they enter the third period ahead, they have usually won; when they have been behind they have lost. Union got the final two scores, the last in an empty net, for the 7-4 win.

Twenty-four hours later, Princeton got better goaltending from Konte, who stopped 19 of 21 RPI shots, but had to settle for a 2-2 tie. The Orange and Black managed 30 shots on net, but just two eluded the Engineers' Mike Tamburro.

The first came right at the buzzer ending the first period, when Kelley, unattended in the slot, whipped home a pass from Tony Ranaldi The goal was his 18th of the year, tops on the team. RPI made it 1-1 at 11 03, but less than a minute elapsed before Ian Sharp scored, assisted by Jason Smith and Rob Sinclair

Problems with penalties hurt the Orange and Black later in the second, and the Engineers used a five-on-three advantage tn tie the score again The entire third period and a five-minute overtime came and went with neither team able to produce the winning gnal. RPI had one called back in the third; Mike Bois and Early missed good chances to score near the end.

"We played well ennugh to win, so it was something to build on," Cahoon comnented after the game.

The building has to start this Friday evening in Baker.

Tigers in Third Place After Second Ivy Sweep

Princeton University's biggest streaking event of the year tonk place during the first snowfall in January and involved hundreds of people, but anyone who turned up at Jadwin gym this weekend could have scen five guys streaking all by themselves.

'The men's basketball team ran their Ivy League winning streak to five games this week, with home-court defeats of Harvard and Brown. With solid play and a little luck, they could take that streak to eight gamcs before facing a serious threat.

Road wins against Cornell and Columbia this weekend, and a March 3 win over Yale, would set Princeton up for a second-placc showdown with Brown on March 4 at Jadwin.

The Bears won a 67-65 overtime contest against the Tigers on February 3, but the Tigers' historical advantage in Jadwin could be more than enough to tip the scales.

Last Road Trip

As a season overloaded with road trips nears its end, the Tigers will take to the buses for one last weekend away this Friday and Saturday.

Princeton will face Cornell, in Ithaca on Friday night, and Columbia in New York City on Saturday. Princetou crushed both teams earlier this month, topping the Lions 76-48 one evening before demolishing the Big Red 95-69.

Cornell suffered a 30-point loss to Brown last weekend, and followed it up with a 76-65 win over Yale. They are currently 4-6 in the league, but have lost six of their last eight Ivy contests.

In case Columbia is feeling feisty, after gaining their first league win of the year over Yale last Friday, Penn will arrive this Friday to soften them up. On Saturday, the Tigers will probably be facing a Lion squad that is still reeling from a 25-point-plus loss to the Quakers the night before.

Crimsan Fall Short

The Harvard game was not the prettiest of the Tigers' efforts this year, hut a win is a win, and Princeton won.

After falling behind 23-7 in the opening minutes of the gaine, Harvard put in a furious full-court press that flustered the young Princeton backcourt and caused repeated turnovers.

The Crimson cut the Princeton lead to 28-19 at the half. Both teams scored 40 pointgs in the final 20 minutes, leaving the final margin at nine points.

How tight was the Harvard defense? Princeton guards Sydney Johnson and Mitch Henderson shot a combined two-nf-11 from the floor, and the Crimson were whistled for 36 personal fouls in the contest. Johnson and Henderson made up for their lack of field goals by taking frequent trips to the foul line. Between them, they shot 26 foul shots.

It was a game of contrasts for freshman point guard Henderson. He committed 10 turnovers in his 38 minutes of playing time, but he also scorcd 15 points and led the team in assists with five. The bulk of his points came from 12-of-16 foul shooting.

Princeton got a big lift from freshman forward James Mastaglio. The 6'4 forward from Garden City, Long island, played all 40 minutes of the contest and scored a career-high 18 points. He shot five-of-five from the floor and seven-of-nine from the foul line to lead the Tiger attack.

Senior center Rick Hielscher scored 11 points for Princeton, while Johnson, Steve Goodrich, and Chris Doyal each scored eight. Doyal also pulled down a game-high 10 rebounds.

Revenge an Big Green

During the first half of the Dartmouth game on Saturday, it looked as though the most stimulating event of the evening would be the halftime ceremony honoring the members of the 1974-75 NIT Champion Princeton squad.

In Hanover this January, the Tigers lost the first game of their Ivy schedule to Dartmouth 64-56. As the game in Jadwin got under way, the Big Green looked ready for a sweep.

Princeton came out very cold from the floor, shooting 33 percent in the first half, compared to the Big Green's 53 8 percent. The disparity took its toll in the form of a 34-23 Dartmnuth lead at halftime.

After a halftime dressing-down from Coach Pete Carril, Princeton took the floor with more purpose. Led by the two captains, Johnson and Hielscher, the Tigers hegan to turn things around.

The real key to the game was Johnson. He led the team in scoring with 19 points, including 11 in the second half, hut his greatest contribution was on the defensive end

Time and again, Johnson has shown that he is ahle to blanket some of the toughest players in the league. On Saturday, he was faced with a fellow-sophomore, Scamus "Sea" Lonergan.

The 6'5 Dartmouth guard came into the game as the Ivy League's leading scorer with 17.2 points per game.

Lonergan was perfect from the floor in the first half, sinking three-of-three field goals and two-of-two foul shots. As the second half began, he appeared to be well on the way to his season average.

In the final 20 minutes, though, Johnson was as effective as a ball and chain around Lonergan's legs. He held his man to a mere two points on four shots in the second half, spiking the Big Green's biggest gun.

New Stadium for University Likely; Decision to Come Later This Year

The clock is ticking for crumbling Palmer Stadium.

A final decision has yet to hc made by Princeton University, hut chances are excellent that when Princeton plays Cornell in Septeinher 1997 it will do so In a brand new stadium, seating somewhere between 25,000 and 30,000 fans.

The 80-year-old Palmer Staibum, the second oldest in the country after Harvard's, has succumhed to the ravages of time and weather to the point where it needs either major renovation work or should be torn down. The concrete has been crumbling for many years, and within the last two years it was discovered that water had seeped into the structure and caused the metal rods uround which the concrete was poured to eorrode.

Building a new stadium would have several advantages. First, it would be less expensive to build a new structure than to pour millions into renovnting the nld one, something that might only buy another couple of decades before more work was needed.

Second, the field within the new stadium could be made large enough to accommodate lucrosse and soccer. Lacrosse Is played in Palmer every spring, but the field is not quite wide cuough. There is a possihility that lights would be added for night play.

A university task force studying the choices will not see un urchitect's proposal for u new stadium until later this year, and a formal decision will not he made until thut time. That will include a detailed cost analysis for a new stadium mutched agulnst the price of renovating the old one. Costs will also determine the seating capucity of the new structure.

Also being studied is a way of incorporating some parts of Palmer Stadium, like the north tower, into the design of n new one. John Hlafter, Director of Physical Plunning, is hopeful that something can be worked ont to sulvage part of Palmer.

Many alumni will be very sad to see the old stadium torn down, including me, Hlafter told "The Daily Princetonian" Inst week.

Anyone who has watched Princeton football through the decades cnn't help but recall some of the memorable contests played there. But a good strong program, like the one currently in place, should be able to provide some new memories pretty quickly.

Princeton also had some help from an unexpected source: the Big Green themselves. After shooting 53.8 percent from the floor in the first half, Dartmouth crashed. They were 16.7 percent from the floor in the final 20 minutes, and had no three-point attempts.

The prime offender was 7'0 center Brian Gilpin, whose 3-of-14 overall performance contributed to his squad's declining fortunes.

Hielscher poured in nine second-half points on his way to a total of 15; he also grabbed a team-high seven rebounds and had seven assists. Doyal contributed eight points and six rebounds.

Other Ivy News

Mastaglio was honored as the Ivy League Rookie of the Week for his performances against Harvard and Dartmouth. The freshman forward has started 19-of-21 games this season, and averages 33.9 minutes per contest.

The Dartmouth win was number 499 in coach Carril's career. He claims not to care about the milestone, although it will make him one of only 16 active Division I coaches to own that honor.

The only strong reaction that anyone is likely to see from Carril this weekend will come if his team fails to make him a 501 game-winner.

Penn swept Dartmouth and Harvard. Surprise, surprise.

The Bears of Brown, Princeton's main competition for second place in the league, suffered a serious setback this week. They managed a home sweep of Columbia and Cornell, but an injury to Eric Blackiston robs them of their best player.

Blackiston broke his left arm while chasing a loose ball in the Cornell game, and will not play for the remainder of the season. He had been the team's leading scorer.

Columbia won its first Ivy match of the year, beating unpredictable Yale 79-69 on Friday night. The Elis went on to lose 76-65 to Cornell on the next evening.

1,000 POINT CELEBRATION: After scoring the 1,000th point of her high school career against Hopewell Valley a week ago Tuesday, PHS senior Laanna Carrasco (No. 34) celebrated with her teammates. The Tigers are headed into the first game of the Central Jersey Group II Tournament, against Shore Regional, on Tuesday at 6 p.m. in the PHS gym.

Carrasco Hits 1,000 Point At Home Against HoVal

Princeton High School senior Laanna Carrasco became the second girl in school history to score over 1,000 points in a high school basketball career last week.

The 6'0 forward hit a short jumper in the third quarter of her team's 47-29 win to join Denise Craig '73 on the very short list of 1,000 point scorers at PHS.

"It's really exciting," she said last week. "It's a nice reward for all the hard work I've done, and for all the hard work my teammates have done to help me get to this point."

The team has certainly been working hard this year. The Tigers have compiled a 14-7 record, setting a school record for wins in a season in the process. They received a No.6 seed in the Central Jersey Group II Tournament, and will face off against Shore Regional next Tuesday at 6. On Tuesday, too late for this issue, they faced CVC rival West Windsor-Plainsboro in the first round of the Mercer County Tournament.

Carrasco ended the season as the top scorer in the conference, averaging 20.8 points per game. Carrasco's production, combined with the 12.7 points-per-game poured in by teammate and fellow-senior Grace Weiner, has helped PHS to an average offensive output of 50.3 points per game.

"She's a very hard-working player," says PHS coach Ron Antoniotti. "She's always the first up for practice. She is an inspiration to a lot of the younger kids — we need that to help develop our program."

Carrasco's hard work is not limited to the basketball court. Her academic success has invited the attention of

We've Got The Market Cornered On Cornering.

On your left, an Audi with front-wheel drive. Unlike rear-wheel drive that pushes you through a curve, this system pulls you through. On your right, another Audi with front-wheel drive. ◊ Either way you look at front-wheel drive, no other German luxury car has it. Take a turn. When the roads get slick you can feel the difference in enhanced handling and control. ◊ Now, the funny thing is, BMW and Mercedes don't even offer this system, yet they charge you more. If that doesn't raise your eyebrow, consider also that Audi gives you a 3-year or 50,000-mile no-charge scheduled maintenance plan whether you lease or buy. ◊ Compared to any German luxury car, seems we've got the maintenance market covered too. Brown University, one of the three colleges she is considering. Two others that have expressed interest are Wagner University and Stetson College, in Florida.

Carrasco's academic and athletic heritage can be traced, at least in part, to her father. David Carrasco, professor of religion at Princeton University and son of the former men's basketball coach at American University, has helped her develop her skills.

"He always encouraged me, but never put any pressure on me," says Carrasco of her father. "Whenever I wanted to go out and shoot, he would come out and give me pointers."

During practice last week, Carrasco's focus was on Tuesday's rematch with WW-P. Early in the season, the Pirates took a 36-30 lead from Princeton. WW-P jumped ahead 12-4 in the early going, and went into a four-corner offense for the remaining three periods.

"We want to beat them," said Carrasco. "We want to go out early and get a lead, so they don't stall on us."

Next week, if PHS has success against Shore Regional, it will be preparing for a rematch with No. 3 seed Somerville, who ousted the Tigers from the state tournament last year.

Somerville struggled against PHS last year, and with another full season's experience under its collective belt, the team, and Carrasco, is not likely to let a victory slip away easily.

Regular Season Ending With PHS Girls at 14-7

The Tiger girls' basketball team ended their regular season with a pair of victories over Valley division rivals. In the same week, they set a school record for victories in a season, and senior Laanna Carrasco passed the 1,000-point plateau.

With a Central Jersey Group II play-off game against Shore Regional scheduled for next Tuesday night, PHS played its Mercer County Tournament game against West Windsor-Plainsboro this Tuesday.

The sixth-seed Tigers lost to the third-seed Pirates 36-30 earlier this season. According to Carrasco, the Tigers hoped to avoid the slow-down tactics employed by WW-P in the first game by gaining the advantage early, and forcing the Pirates to bring the ball inside.

Against Hamilton on Friday, Carrasco and Grace Weiner combined for 50 points, eclipsing the Hornets in a 60-49 win.

Carrasco scored 37 points in a game that was closer than the score indicates.

Hamilton kept pace with PHS throughout the first three quarters, using its outside shooting with deadly effect. The Hornets sank six treys in the contest.

The score was locked at 40-40 when the third period ended, but PHS used a late surge to pull ahead. The Tigers outscored Hamilton 20-9 over the final eight minutes to pull away with the win.

In addition to her 13 points, Weiner grabbed 12 rebounds in the match.

The Tigers have had trouble with Hopewell Valley all year, squeaking by with a pair of two-point wins earlier in the season; but last Tuesday, they whipped the Bulldogs, 47-29.

Carrasco took a pass from Weiner early in the third period and nailed a short jumper, making her the second girl in the history of PHS to reach the 1,000-point mark. She ended the game with 22 points. Weiner added 14, as PHS outscored HoVal 27-14 in the second half.

Tigers Will Visit Mikes To Fight for Valley Title

Assuming that McCorristin was able to beat 1-14 Hopewell Valley on Tuesday night (not a daring assumption,) Princeton's road game against the Iron Mikes on Thursday will decide the championship of the CVC's Valley division.

With a pair of conference wins this week, PHS improved to 12-3 in the CVC. McCorristin notched a victory over Notre Dame last week to knock the Irish out of contention. A win over HoVal would make McCorristin 12-3 as well, setting up the second season-ending showdown in as many years between PHS and the Mikes.

McCorristin took the first meeting this year, beating PHS 51-46 on the Tigers' home court. In spite of their depleted roster and a five-day lay-off, the Tigers will be looking to return the favor.

Coach Doug Snyder has lost six of the 14 players whose names originally appeared on his varsity roster to injuries, academic problems, and personal matters.

"The guys who want to be here are the ones who are here," says Snyder. "There is something about these eight remaining guys that says 'coach, it's going to be ugly — you're going to have to use all of your time-outs, you're going to have to yell at us — but we're going to win.' It's a group of winners."

Snyder knows that the biggest challenge his team will face on Thursday will come from the McCorristin backcourt duo of Derrell "Budha" Coleman and Mike DeRocckis.

McCorristin is well aware that PHS has lost starting point guard Tracy Wade to academic problems. "Any team worth its salt is going to make us handle the ball under pressure," says Snyder. "We have to execute on the offense."

McCorristin will play the Tigers very tough on Thursday, and will probably have the overwhelming advantage in fan support. However, PHS enters the game riding a pair of CVC road wins. "This week winning two on the road was really good for us," said Snyder.

Topped Hamilton

PHS survived a late run to top Hamilton 51-42 last Thursday. The Tigers held the Hornets to 21 points through the first three quarters of play, building a 35-21 lead.

Senior captain Kirk Webber threw down 21 points on the evening, and Brandon McEwen was good for 11. Point guard Erik Nyberg and senior shooting guard Foreal Wooten each scored seven.

Hamilton rallied in the fourth quarter, doubling their score with another 21 points, but PHS added 16 of their own to stay ahead.

A week ago Tuesday, Hopewell Valley rattled the Tigers by taking them into overtime. Princeton came away with a 46-39 win, largely due to Webber's eight points in the overtime period.

The 6'4 center made his game-high total 23 by sinking six foul shots and a field goal in the final minutes. His teammates helped out with stifling defense, holding the Bulldogs to three points in the OT period.

McEwen scored 10 points in the HoVal win, and Dawud Towler chipped in with eight.

Hoops Douhleheader At PHS on Tuesday

Princeton High School's two varsity basketball teams both secured the home court advantage for their first-round state tournament games, and will play back-to-back on Tuesday.

The PHS girls' team, boasting a No. 6 seed in the Central Jersey Division, will battle Shore Regional at 6 p.m.

The nightcap will feature the No. 7 seed PHS boys against Voorhees, in an 8 p.m. start.

With a number of new faces appearing in the lineup, PHS crushed visiting Newark East Side High School 75-39 on Saturday.

Webber led the way with 24 points, while Wooten, who has been silent during the most recent part of the season, found his range and scored 15. McEwen scored 10 points, and MarShawn Ferguson had nine.

Voorhees on Tuesday

In the second half of an evening that will feature two CJ11 playoff games, PHS will host Voorhees. The Tigers earned a seventh seed in the tournament, giving them the home court advantage. The game will begin at 8 p.m. on Tuesday.

After scouting Voorhees last week, Snyder expects to see them play a man-to-man defense or a two-three zone.

The evening will begin with the sixth-seed PHS girls' varsity team hosting Shore Regional in a 6 p.m. start.

Hun Ousted from States, Beaten in Season Finale

The Hun girls' basketball team ended their season as they began it — in disappointment. The Raiders finished the year with a 3-17 record, losing to Lacordaire in the first round of the Prep "B" state tournament, and getting pasted by Trenton in their final regular season game.

The Raiders took an early 13-10 lead over Lacordaire last week, but their hosts outscored them in each of the remaining three quarters to post a 47-37 win.

Cassie Lawton scored 10 points for Hun, while Michelle Giller and Leah Bills each had nine. Ivy Green scored seven.

The Raiders were pummeled, perhaps a little too thoroughly, by Trenton on Thursday.

Even after establishing a 28-4 first quarter lead, the Tornadoes refused to let up. The visitors walked out of the gym with an 80-11 win.

Bills' seven points led the Raiders.

Hun Hockey Ends Year With 7-3 Loss to Eustace

The Raider hockey team may have ended the year on a down note, but their 12-7 final record is reason enough for them to hold their heads high. The Hun program turned itself around this season, opening the year with four straight wins, and going on to notch victories against some of the best teams in the Colonial Valley Conference.

Bill Renshaw led the squad in scoring, with 33 points (19 goals, 14 assists.) He was followed by Ross Barbieri, whose 22 goals and seven assists gave him 29 points. Nick Burke was a reliable number three man, with 11 goals and 13 assists.

Against Bishop Eustace last Friday, captain Scott Gifis had a goal and two assists in the Raiders' losing effort.

Gifis and Burke scored back-to-back goals in the first period to give Hun a brief 2-1 lead, before the Crusaders tied it up.

A Jed Moody goal at 14:41 put Hun ahead 3-2 until the end of the period.

Unfortunately for Hun, the Crusaders were just too strong. Bishop Eustace scored five unanswered goals over the remainder of the contest to secure the win.

PDS Boys' Basketball Advances in Prep B

The Princeton Day basketball team blew away Wardlaw in the quarterfinals of the Prep B Tournament last Saturday, avenging a pair of losses to the Rams.

Wardlaw had beaten the Panthers a year ago in the finals of the Prep B, and then again during the regular season last month, winning 90-65. This time coach David First's players were more than ready.

They jumped out to a 21-13 lead after the first eight minutes of play, and upped that to 38-24 by halftime. After a close third period, the Blue and White poured it on in the final quarter, coming away with an 82-50 victory.

Four players scored in double figures for the winners led by Jaron Randall with 18. Matt Labosco finished with 17, Pete Denby contributed 16 and Mike O'Neill had 10.

BOYD IN GEAR: Princeton Day's Eric Boyd drives around a Wardlaw defender in Saturday's game. The Panthers whipped the defending Prep B champions, 82-50, to advance to the semifinals this Wednesday.

Moving on to the semifinals this Wednesday, Princeton Day will face Pennington, a team it nipped by three points in overtime earlier this month. The contest will be played at St. Benedicts, and the finals at 2 p.m. Saturday at Immaculata High School in Somerville.

Hun Advances in States After Loss to Solebury

The Raiders stopped Peddie 78-61 in the quarterfinal round of the Prep "A" state basketball tournament last Friday, guaranteeing themselves a slot in the upcoming semifinal round.

The outcome of this one was not in doubt for very long. Peddie stayed within striking distance for one quarter, but then the Raiders pulled ahead to stay.

Hun senior Greg Burston led all scorers with 28 points, while Marlon Dodd came up big with 22 of his own.

Solebury got revenge for two Hun victories earlier this year, topping the Raiders 61-55 on Friday night. Burston had 23 in the losing effort, and Nick Giello added 11.

PDS Girls' Win 43-23 In Prep B Tournament

The Princeton Day girls' basketball team took the first step toward the Prep B title last Saturday, knocking off Rutgers Prep, 43-23, in the quarterfinal round. If there was a sense of deja vu to the proceedings, it was because the Panthers had already whipped the Argonauts twice before, once in Decemher and once in January.

This time wasn't much different; eoach Jill Thomas' girls cruised to a 16-6 lead at the end of the first quarter and led hy 27-11 at the half. Darcy Peifer had another good game, leading PDS's scoring attack with 15 points. Sara Hart had a nice game, scoring 10 points and collecting four assists and four steals. Lindsey Sternberg did her usual solid job under the basket, grabbing 10 rebounds. Dana DeCore had six points and six steals.

The Panthers will meet third-seeded Gill St. Bernards, which defeated Pennington, this Wednesday at Oak Knoll in the semifinals. They already own a 19-point triumph over GSB, so chances are PDS will be faeing top-seeded Villa Walsh in the finals this Saturday at noon at Immaculata High Sehool in Somerville.

The victory, the seventh straight for PDS, improved its record to 17-4.

Key Games Are Ahead For PDS Hockey Team

The Princeton Day hockey team will finish its season in the next week with the chance to accomplish several things.

The Panthers, currently with a reeord of 7-10 have four games remaining, one regular season encounter with Rye Country Day Wednesday, February 22, two contests in the PDS Tournament on Friday and Saturday, February 24 and 25, and the finals of the Prep B Tournament on Monday, February 27. If coach Matt Lustig's team were to win them all, a tall order, it would finish with a winning (11-10) record.

The tournament will feature Princeton Day facing off against Portledge in the first game Friday at 3, and Hill against Brunswick in the second game, starting at 5. Losers will square off in the consolation round at 10, with the championship game set for 12:30 the next day. The Panthers will be looking to reverse an earlier meeting with Portledge; they lost a 3-2 overtime game to the Long Island team in late January. Last year PDS split its tournament games, losing a 5-4 overtime decision to Brunswick in the opening round, but defeating Portledge, 4-3, also in overtime to capture the consolation.

The most important game of the four will come on Monday against Pingry in the finals of the Prep B. PDS will have the home iee advantage, and will be looking to defeat Big Blue for the seeond time this season. PDS won 5-4 earlier this month.

HART SHOOTS FOR TWO: Princeton Day's Sara Hart shoots over a Rutgers Prep defender Saturday in the Prep B quarterfinal game. Hart contributed 10 points to the 43-23 victory.

Stuart Ice Hockey Team Skates Past N.J Devils

The Stuart ice hockey team won its only game this past week when the Tartans notched a 2-1 victory over the New Jersey Devils elub team. The reeord for Coach Jim Higgins' team now stands at 7-7-1.

Stuart found the scoreboard first when sophomore Nicky Karluk picked up a pass from Jonelle Lupero and put it in the net. Just minutes later, senior Caiti Higgins made the seore 2-0 when she converted a Jaimie Healey assist.

The Devils prevented a shutout with a second-period tally, but Tartan netminder Sara Applegate completed 26 saves to preserve the victory.

"It was a great win for us," said eoaeh Higgins. "The kids played really hard. Caiti, Jaimie and Stacy [Sparella] played exceptionally well on offense. Alicia [Fruseione], Kristy [Moore] and Gia [Fruseione] played great defense in front of Sara. We have improved so mueh over the last few weeks, and now we have a chance to move over .500."

Coach Higgins' squad will finish its season this week, with two games on the road. Stuart travels to the Beaeon Hill (N.J.) club team this Wednesday and to Newton Country Day School in Newton, Mass., for its final game of the season on Saturday.

Stuart Basketball Ends Much Improved Season

The Stuart basketball team, finished its season on Saturday when the Tartans dropped a Prep B quarterfinal tournament game to Wardlaw-Hartridge, 41-26. Yet, despite the loss to Wardlaw-Hartridge and a 44-30 defeat by Princeton Day earlier in the week, the season was an upbeat one for the Stuart squad.

"We improved a great deal," said seeond-year coaeh Bill Holup. "The girls played with a lot of heart and determination; I'm proud of them. They also won more games this season than they had in the two previous seasons combined." Holup's team finished with a 10-11 record.

Against Wardlaw-Hartridge, Stuart standout Sehevilla Courtney finished the final game of her senior year with a team-leading 13 points. Classmate Eliza Hoover followed with seven. Patrice O'Leary chipped in four; Jenita Davis added two.

Courtney and O'Leary seored 10 apieee against PDS, followed hy Burchell and Hoover with four cach. Davis contributed two. Maria Korsgaard and Elisa Schement-Heek played tough defense, but did not seore.

Kingston Hockey Club To Host Russian Team

The Kingston Hockey Club will play an exhibition match against a St. Petersburg-hased team of Russian "Old Timers" on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. on the Lawrenceville School ice. Admission to the game is free.

The Russian squad is made up of past members of world championship teams, Olympic squads, and professional teams.

Aceording to Boh Smyth, general manager of the Kingston Hockey Club, the Russian team will provide interested spectators with a close look at the quality play that is produced by the Russian national hockey program. The game is likely to be very entertaining, he said.

Kingston will return to regular Commuters' League play on Saturday with a rematch against the Princeton Hockey Club. The game is scheduled for 6:45 p.m. at Iceland

PHS Wrestlers End Year 8-3 in Conference Battles

The PHS wrestlers eapped their regular season with a 61-10 dismantling of an undermanned Ewing squad last Saturday. PHS took six forfeit victories, including the first three bouts of the match.

Chris Goettinger, Ryan Clader, and Basil Zaki eaeh registered pins for PHS, as the Tigers gear up for individual competition in Wednesday's Regional opener.

In the opening round of the state team tournament, PHS suffered a predictable loss to state-ranked South Plainfield. The score was 57-6, with Princeton's only win coming by forfeit in the heavyweight class.

Welfare Director

week It did not state, however, that Mr. Lattimore had to be called upon, since the Local Assistance Boards, by statute, are responsible for hiring a welfare director. The municipality, however, is responsible for budgeting the salary and other expenses of a welfare department.

———

Last Wednesday, two members of the Borough Local Assistance Board resigned. Anna Hofgesang, the chair, left after 37 years on the Board. Hannah Kahn resigned after serving for 14 years.

Marjorie Blaxill, chair of the Township Local Assistance Board, said early this week that the loss of the two Borough members would make it impossible for the two Boards to continue their united position on hiring the person they had selected.

This is because, she said, Borough Mayor Marvin Reed has the power to appoint the new members. Mayor Reed has been supportive of naming Mr. Lattimore to the post.

Speaking for herself and her colleagues on the Township Local Assistance Board, Carol Horowitz and Beatrice Boyer, Ms. Blaxill said, "We have decided not to resign. We will accept the appointment of Ovie Lattimore as acting welfare director.

"This is simply a financially cost effective solution," she added. "The Civil Rights Commission members called us and asked us to save Mr. Lattimore. I said we weren't there to solve this problem, but to get the best person possible. But the most important mandate is to help the indigent."

New Director an Attorney

Mr. Lattimore is an attorney who lives with his wife on Park Place. They expect their first child in April.

He is a graduate of Fairleigh Dickinson University and, in 1986, of the Seton Hall University School of Law.

Born and reared in Plainfield, Mr. Lattimore grew up in public housing with his mother and seven brothers and sisters. He was formerly an office director and lobbyist with the American Civil Liberties Union, a reporter at the Star-Ledger, and an assistant prosecutor in Essex County.

In his Borough Hall office on Monday, Mr. Lattimore said he saw his new role as a logical addition to his current one. "If we look at the civil rights movement, at what Martin Luther King was doing at the time of his death, he was trying to address the needs of the poor and disadvantaged. I see that as an extension of the civil rights movement, which we are doing in Princeton at the local level."

Ovie Lattimore

Mr. Lattimore said that welfare is not just handing out checks, hut includes providing social services. To this end, he wants to forge strong alliances with organizations such as MECHA (Mercer County Hispanic Association), Corner House, and Family Service in order to provide help to clients.

"This isn't one person trying to identify the needs of the disadvantaged in the community," said Mr. Lattimore. "This is a more comprehensive approach."

He plans to continue the traditional objectives of the Civil Rights Commission, but said that it is necessary to recognize changing times. "In the reevaluation of civil rights and welfare that is now going on, we must not be afraid to explore alternative methods of dealing with long-standing problems," he said.

Ms. Blaxill said she had checked with the State and learned that the resignation of Dorothy Netta, the former joint welfare director who left at the end of last year, will not become effective until April 30 because Ms. Netta did not take the vacations owed her.

"I will recommend that Mr. Lattimore be appointed acting director for an additional 90 days beyond that," she said. This move would bring his tenure as acting director to July 30, 1995.

Ms. Blaxill said that this amount of time on the job would allow Mr. Lattimore to figure out if this is what he wants to do.

The municipal welfare director handles cases of single adults only, including residents at the Princeton Nursing Home. The current caseload is about 40.

Mr. Lattimore was at the welfare office last Thursday, said Ms. Blaxill, heginning his new job. "I told him to start," she said.

posed realignment of Route 517 (Washington Road) along the edge of the SRI Sarnoff lahoratories property to a new comhined Harrison Street-Washington Road interchange approximately midway between these entries to Princeton.

Taking off to the east of Route 571 at a point this side of the railroad bridge in Princeton Junction, it would skirt the Sarnoff property, cross Route 1 at an overpass with a three-quarter clover leaf located primarily on the Sarnoff property, and continue toward Princeton on Princeton University land.

Aligned to minimize impact on University lands and playing fields, it would curve west to rejoin Washington Road just before the Lake Carnegie bridge. It would also have a spur to the east that would connect to Harrison Street south of its bridge over Lake Carnegie.

When this proposed new alignment is completed, Washington Road and Harrison Street would both dead end at Route 1. Both would continue to feed traffic to Route 1 but via the new alignment and the interchange located in the vicinity of the electric substation. Through traffic headed east on Route 571 (the Princeton-Hightstown Road) would cross Route 1 via an overpass unimpeded by traffic light or traffic circle.

Penns Neck Bypass

A DOT representative gave a presentation on this proposal, which he called the Penns Neck Bypass Project, to the Planning Board last fall. He said the DOT had retained a private firm to obtain input from the University, SRI, PSE&G and Eden Institute and that Scheme D-1, described above, had received "a degree of universal support never experienced by the DOT before."

A University representative in the audience confirmed this and said that as soon as the alignment was definite, the University planned to plant elms on either side of the proposed roadway to replicate over time the tree-lined look of the Washington Road entry to Princeton.

At the time, Planning Board members expressed delight that the realigned roadway would be two lanes and not four. Mr. Kornhauser reiterated his approval of this concept last Thursday.

"Ten years ago the DOT wouldn't have considered anything less than a four-lane highway," he said. "We really do applaud them."

In their meeting with Commissioner Wilson, Mr. Kornhauser and the circulation committee also expressed approval of the decision to build S-92 to Route 1, although they urged that it be continued to Route 206. They cited the Princeton Regional Planning Board's achievements in downzoning and its support of preservation of open space as successes in the search for solutions to Princeton's and the region's traffic problems.

Turning from successes to concerns, Mr. Kornhauser cited "explosive growth" in the surrounding area as the prime cause of these problems. He pointed to enormous housing and commercial development in Montgomery and Hillsborough (Montgomery was recently mentioned in the press for the record number of housing starts) and commercial developments such as the Home Depot that has just opened in the massive Nassau Park retail and office development in West Windsor.

Circumferential Relief

"Traffic from the north and south is focused right through Princeton with no opportunity for it to get around," Mr. Kornhauser told the board. He said what was needed was "circumferential relief," by

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Tod Peyton

SNAP DECISIONS

You have only been looking for two weekends, but you have found a house that looks perfect! You want to buy it, but you are reluctant to make an offer without having looked at more houses.

Whether you are in a buyer's or seller's market, the best homes usually get snapped up quickly. When you find a great home that is well-priced, you may not have much time to think it over, but it is difficult to make such an enormous purchasing decision without at least "sleeping on it". If you hesitate, you could lose the house to another buyer. If you go rushing forward, you may spend some time nursing a case of "Buyer's Remorse". A professional Realtor can make your decision easier by helping you to be as informed as possible. Your agent can provide information about recent sales of other homes in the area and answer any questions you may have. You might also want to keep in mind that a Realtor's job is to find you a property that you want to buy, not to show you a lot of houses that won't interest you!

For dependable, individual advice on buying or selling real estate, call Tod Peyton, Realtor or any Peyton Associate at 921-1550. Feel free to stop by my office at 343 Nassau Street in Princeton.

FOLLOW THE DOTTED LINES: This map which Alain Kornhauser handed out to Planning Board members last week illustrates what he and the Circulation Committee mean by "circumferential relief" for Princeton's regional traffic problems. At the left, the map shows Carter Road extended (the dotted line) to Route 1. Parallel to it is Province Line Road, with the dotted line indicating the missing link from Pretty Brook (not shown) to Cherry Valley as well as the Stony Brook bridge currently out of commission. To the right, on a diagonal is S-92, with the segment from Exit 8A of the New Jersey Turnpike to Route 1 shown as a larger dotted line than the segment from Route 1 to Route 206 which is not currently under consideration. The Penns Neck Bypass with its spur to Harrison Street is in the center of the map.

Traffic

which he meant two-lane roads at the perimeter of Princeton.

In Mr. Kornahuser's view, Province Line Road should be one of these circumferential roads, linking Route 518 to the north with Route 1 to the south. To do this, the Stony Brook bridge between Rosedale Road and Pretty Brook Road would have to be restored, and the missing portion of Province Line Road over the rocky ridge between Pretty Brook Road and Cherry Valley Road would have to be constructed.

The concept also requires the construction of the new bridge over the D&R Canal linking Province Line Road with Quaker Road, but this piece was approved as part of the Walmart approval and stands a greater chance of becoming reality than rebuilding the Stony Brook bridge or constructing the missing link over the ridge.

Nonetheless, Mr. Kornhauser sees Province Line Road as serving a similar function to two-lane limited access S-92 extending from the New Jersey Turnpike to Route 206. The portion of S-92 from the Turnpike to Route 1 has been approved for construction by the Turnpike Commissioners and is awaiting final approval from the Governor. The segment from Route 1 to Route 206 was removed from consideration because of opposition and environmental factors.

"A Release Valve"

Mr. Kornhauser stressed that in addition to being extended to Route 206, S-92 should not have curb cuts — only sufficient widening at intersections to allow left and right turning movements. Without curb cuts there would be no new sites for development, he noted, allowing the road to act "as a release valve to allow traffic to go around instead of through Princeton."

Mr. Kornhauser would also like to see Carter Road extended from Route 206 to Route 1 and Canal Pointe Boulevard extended through Nassau Park to Quaker Bridge Road. Carter Road extended would function as a second "western bypass" along with Province Line Road extended. The notion of eastern and western bypasses has long been on Mercer County long-range planning maps, and the idea of restoring the Province Line Road bridge over Stony Brook and building the missing link is part of the 1989 Princeton Community Master Plan.

Mr. Kornhauser said the views of the group were well received by the Commissioner, but that he asked Princeton to take the lead in obtaining the cooperation of neighboring municipalities, particularly in regard to extending S-92 to Route 206.

William S. Kilborne, 82, of Meadow Lakes, Hightstown, died February 13 at Princeton Medical Center. Born in Stockbridge, Mass., he lived in New York and in Princeton for many years before moving to Meadow Lakes several years ago.

Mr. Kilborne graduated from Groton School and received his B.A. degree from Yale University and his MBA from Harvard University. He was a self-employed business consultant for the textile industry and vice president in charge of sales and a trustee of William Skinner & Sons, textile manufacturers, from 1937 to 1953, when he retired. He was also a member of the board of the International Silk Association.

After retiring, Mr. Kilborne went to work for the federal government as a special assistant for cabinet liaison to the Secretary of Commerce, Sinclair Weeks. He was a member of the National Defense Executive Reserve and the National Association of Business Economists. He was an official U.S. advisor to the U.S. Regional Office in Paris in 1956 at a meeting of the Textile Committee of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation.

As a member of the Cabinet secretariat and as committee management officer he worked with the White House to reduce the number of working committees in the Government.

While living in New York, Mr. Kilborne was very active in community affairs. He was a board member of Lenox Hill Neighbor Association, presiding as its president for five years, and a member of the Morningside Community Center, National Federation of Settlements and the New York School of Social Work. He was a consultant in corporate growth and a member of the Association for Corporate Growth.

In Princeton he was a member of Nassau Presbyterian Church and worked for Recording for the Blind for more than 10 years.

Surviving are his wife, Virginia Wylie Kilborne; three sons, William S. Kilborne of Ft. Worth, Tex., Benjamin B. Kilborne of Los Angeles, Calif., and Allerton W. Kilborne of Washington, D.C.; a daughter, Katharine K. Cornwell of Narberth, Pa.; a sister, Elizbeth Hudnut of Rochester, N.Y.; seven grandchildren and a great-grandson.

A memorial service was held Saturday at Nassau Presbyterian Church. Burial in Princeton Cemetery was private. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be sent to Yale University, New Haven, Conn., or Recording for the Blind, Princeton Unit, 36A Hibben Lane, Princeton 08540.

Dorena S. D'Ippolito, 35, of Lawrenceville, died February 16 at Princeton Medical Center following a lengthy illness. Born in New York City, she lived in the Princeton area most of her life.

Ms. D'Ippolito was a graduate of The Hun School and attended Boston Conservatory and Rider College. She was a classical ballet dancer and actress for 25 years and had often performed at McCarter Theatre as well as at other regional theatres. She made several appearances on "Saturday Night Live."

She is survived by her mother, Renita D'Ippolito of Lawrenceville; and an aunt and uncle, Lia Della Kreslins and C.W. Deaton of Lawrenceville.

The service was held Monday at Kimble Funeral Home, the Rev. James H. Harris Jr., pastor of Princeton United Methodist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Princeton Cemetery. Contributions in her memory may be made to the charity of the donor's choice.
